BRITISH GAIN NEAR FESTUBERT; FRENCH REPULSE ATTACKS

London, April 13.—The Rheinland, Germann battleship of 18,600 tons, has sunk in the Baltic after striking a floating mine, according to report. In connection with this report are indications of German preparations for a great naval raid.

With the allied armies in the north holding firm against German attack, American troops, acting with French comrades-in-arms, have smashed a second strong German attack in the Apremont Forest sector, southeast of St. Mihiel and east of the Meuse river of bloody record. The official morning reports recounted the repulse of a German attack in this sector yesterday by American and French troops. The latest report shows that the Huns renewed their attack in the night, but with equal lack of success. They did penetrate to an allied trench section, but were hurled out quickly.

The Germans bombarded Rheims again, and part of the city was set o nfire, the Paris official statement says. London reports two distinct gains by the allies farther north. The British made another advance in the Festubert sector, about twelve miles southwest of Armentieres. In the Hangard-en-Santerre sector, nearly due east of Amins, British and Frnch troops rcapturd positions after sharp fighting.

By International News Service.

London, April 13.—The British counter offensive in the Festubert sector of the great battle line along the Franco-Belgian frontier is gaining strength, and another advance of the British lines was noted by the War Office report today.

Heavy fighting has continued at the neighborhood of Wolverghen, where the Germans have been directing strong pressure in an effort to shake the hold of the British upon the Messines ridge.

A number of strong attacks were delivered by the Germans in the Locon district, but they broke down under the firm resistance of the British.

Festubert is between eleven and twelve miles southwest of Armentieres, which the British evacuated on Wednesday, and about eighteen miles north of Arras. The same sector was the scene of a British advance on Thursday, when the

50 ASYLUM INMATES PERISH IN FIRE

Feeble-Minded Patients of Oklahoma Institution Dash Back Into Flames

By International News Service.

Norman, Okla., April 13.—Thirty-seven children are among the dead in a fire which early today burned to death more than fifty inmates of the Oklahoma Asylum for the Insane here and destroyed three ward buildings.

A large number of patients also are reported seriously burned and otherwise injured. Most of the children were feeble minded or epileptic, and efforts to save them were thwarted by many in who in excitement and terror ran back into the flames after being carried out.

Little ones of all ages, with a dim comprehension of what was happening, abruptly turned by instinct to the rooms which they had known as home. They were not able to comprehend that they were rushing back to death.

The fire broke out about 4 o'clock in the drying room. The cause has not been ascertained. Before fire fighters had arrived the flames had spread throughout that building and to those adjoining.

The number of dead cannot be stated definitely until there has been a checking up of those who escaped. The loss in burned buildings and furniture was about $20,000.

SENATOR STONE WORSE; ONE SIDE PARALYZED

Washington, April 13.—The condition of Senator Stone, who suffered a stroke of paralysis Wednesday, took a turn for the worse last night, it was announced this afternoon.

His secretary, John J. Cochran, announced that he had been authorized by Dr. Sprigg to make the following statement of Senator Stone's condition:

"Senator Stone had a restless night. "This morning his pulse was 126; temperature 101.6; respiration 28.

"No motion of left leg or arm. "Is taking liquid nourishment fairly well."

BOSTON BOUND VESSEL TORPEDOED, BUT SAVED

The British steamship Alchinoua, bound from England to Boston, was torpedoed by a German submarine, but managed to make her way back to port, according to information received by importers in this city.

The message stated that the watertight bulkheads held, and before a second torpedo could be launched a destroyer was sighted, causing the U-boat to submerge. Captain Kendall then took his vessel back to the British port from which she sailed.

The Alchinoua is owned by the Ocean Steamship Company of Liverpool and is under charter to the Leyland Line. The cargo consisted o... digo, garden seeds and general merchandise.

Outnumbered 6 to 1, Lancashires Beat Huns at Givenchy

By International News Service.

London, April 13.—One of the most brilliant exploits of the big battle now raging along the Franco-Belgian frontier was performed by English troops from Lancashire.

Facing six times their number the Lancashire unit defeated the germans at Givenchy. The left wing of the British army had been compelled to give ground and the brunt of the fighting was falling upon the Lancashire forces.

Being exhausted they retired a short distance for a rest and then delivered a strong counter thrust with the bayonet, routing forty companies of picked German troops. The Germans had hoped to penetrate to Bethune but were frustrated by the brave resistance of the English.

BASEBALL FUND WELL ON WAY TO VICTORY

The way it looks now, there is nothing that can stop the New England public from giving the Boston AMERICAN'S Camp Devens Baseball Fund such a boost that it will win, 100 to 0.

The idea of building at Camp Devens a grandstand and baseball field, where the men of the 76th Division can play the national game in their off hours, has taken hold of the imaginations of the public, and the voluntary donations are coming in in a most satisfactory manner.

But keep them coming, folks. Keep them coming!

We have got to build this grand stand on the land which the government has furnished for the purpose.

PRISONERS OF U-58 COMING TO U. S.

Officers and Crew Captured by American Destroyers to Be Interned Here

By International News Service.

Washington, April 13.—Practically an entire German U-boat crew will be held in the United States as prisoners of war. They will land at an American port in the very near future and will be sent to a detention camp as prisoners of war, there to stay until the war ends.

The crew is that from the German U-58, captured by the destroyers Fanning and Nicholson several months ago, and which was sunk after capture by the officers opening the seacocks of the craft. The personnel of the party, it was learned today, comprises four commissioned officers, one warrant officer and thirty-three enlisted men.

EASIER TO FEED HERE.

Bringing these men to this country is accepted here as indicating that the policy of the United States will be to retain charge of all German prisoners of war. Those taken by the army on the Western front will probably be returned to the United States, thus solving the question of supplying them with food. It will be very much easier to feed them here than on the other side now that the food shortage in France, Italy and Great Britain necessitates this country sending practically all food across the Atlantic.

DEPORTATION OF PASTOR MINIFIE DEMANDED

The arrest and deportation of Rev. Dr. William C. Minifie, formerly pastor of the Clarendon Street Baptist Church, is being urged upon the War Department by the British provost marshal in New York City, according to Vice-Consul John P. Trant at the Boston consulate.

It is charged at the consulate that Rev. Dr. Minifie wore in this country the uniform of a captain in the London City Guards, to which he was not entitled, and that he obtained funds for charitable war work that were not expended for that purpose.

According to the latest advices Dr. Minifie is now making his home at the fashionable Mission Inn at Riverside, Cal. He was interviewed there on March 25 by Dr. O. P. Gifford, a former Brookline Baptist clergyman, whose home is at Pasadena, Cal.

At the outbreak of the war Dr. Minifie was elected a chaplain of the London City Guards, which gave him the right to wear a captain's uniform. The guard was reorganized in 1916, and the commission lapsed, and with it the right to continue to appear in the uniform, it is alleged.

It is said that Dr. Minifie formed an organization known as the International Bible Institute, and that funds were solicited for assistance for the sick and wounded, canteen work, and the support of an army ward in the Enfield Hospital at Surrey, England.

Scotland yard, it is said, investigated the institute, and on March 25 charged that "the institute exists in name only," and that the hospital had not received any assistance from it.

After being refused permission to visit France by the British authorities, Dr. Minifie came to Boston about three months ago. Shortly afterwards he lectured at the Clarendon Street Church, wearing, it is said, the English officers' uniform.

COMMONS HOLDS FIRM ON IRISH CONSCRIPTION

London, April 13.—Whether military conscription or home rule would come first to Ireland was the big political question in the public eye today.

The House of Commons sitting in committee, passed the Irish conscription clause of the man power bill by a majority of 185.

The debate was marked by an eloquent plea by Arthur Henderson, the Labor leader, that conscription be deferred until Home Rule is a reality.

The action of Commons follows the report of the Irish home rule convention recommending that a Parliament be established in Dublin at once.

The Chronicle, in commenting upon the Irish situation, today said:

"The front bench (members of the government) was moved either by the indignation of the Irish or by the grave and firm protest made by Premier Premier Asquith. A majority of the House, we believe, including many Unionists, thoroughly dislikes it, but naturally no majority wants to expose its country to a political upheaval in the midst of a perilous military situation. All that was possible was a definite and dignified protest against a policy which most of us believe to be exerting needless and perhaps irreparable mischief for no compensating return. The protest is now on record."

The government's firmness on the Irish question has served to check those who were at first disposed to question its policy.

JOPLIN TO ALLOW FOE TO DIVIDE US, SAYS KAISER

[illegible] "We have never doubted for a moment that the world powers [illegible] efforts on an equal plane with your own, since we are united in behalf of the rights of [illegible] peoples," telegraphed the Kaiser to Emperor Charles of Austria, said a dispatch from Berlin today. The Kaiser's messages continued: "We must reckon with the enemy's efforts to divide us. It is our duty to attack the enemy mercilessly in all theatres of war and defeat him."

CLOSE SALOONS TO KEEP PRO-GERMANS FROM MOB

JOPLIN, Mo., April 13.—Because of threatened pro-German mob violence, the city authorities this afternoon closed all saloons in the city and took several alleged German sympathizers into custody to prevent them from falling into the hands of angry citizens.

110 GERMAN DIVISIONS USED IN MIGHTY EFFORT TO BREAK THROUGH

Germans were thrown out of positions they had occupied.

East of Locon the Germans were able to penetrate some British positions, but were quickly thrown out by counter attacks.

(Locon is between two and three miles north of Bethune and between five and six miles northwest of La Bassee.)

The British captured some prisoners in their successful counter assaults in the Festubert sector.

"Hard fighting developed last night in the sectors of Neuve Eglise and Wulverghem, and at a late hour it was still continuing," the official statement said.

Advance Near Festubert

"In the neighborhood of Festubert the British advanced their lines and captured some prisoners.

"Following a severe bombardment a strong hostile attack was delivered against the British positions east of Locon.

"The Germans succeeded in entering our lines at certain points, but were quickly driven out by counter attacks.

"Another attack was delivered in the same locality later in the night, but was beaten off.

"West of Merville the enemy assaulted our lines during the night, but was beaten off there also.

"The rest of the northern battle front situation is unchanged.

"South of the Somme River (Picardy battle line) there was sharp local fighting. Allied positions into which the enemy had entered in the sector of Hangard-en-Santerre were retaken by British and French troops.

"North of the Somme the German artillery was very active."

Rheims Set on Fire

American and French troops repulsed strong German attacks in Brule wood, in the sector of Apremont forest, during the night, the French War Office announced today. At one point where the Germans secured a footing in an allied trench position they were thrown out by a counter-attack.

On the Picardy battle field (Picardy front), the French have recaptured Hangard-en-Santerre and the cemetery from the Germans. Seventy prisoners were captured.

The artillery duel in the region of Noyon continues. Rheims has been set on fire by German shells.

The Paris communique follows:

"German attacks in Brule wood were renewed during the night. American troops, acting with the French, smashed the majority of the attacks. At one point where the Germans succeeded in gaining a footing in an allied trench section they were quickly thrown out by a counter-attack.

"On the Somme battle front the French have recaptured Hangard village and the cemetery. Artillery combats continue around Noyon. The Germans again bombarded Rheims and part of the city was set afire."

"MUST BE NO RETIREMENT."

Strengthened by Field Marshal Haig's stern order "that there must be no retirement," and by the knowledge that French troops are coming to their aid, the British soldiers engaging the Germans along the Franco-Belgian front are holding out bravely against overwhelming odds in one of the bloodiest battles the world has ever seen.

That the struggle, which began with the German drive against Amiens on March 21, has reached a crucial phase, was shown by Field Marshal Haig's pregnant phrase, "We are fighting with our backs to the wall."

The Germans during the past twenty-four hours have been making a determined effort to break into Bailleul.

Bailleul is between six and seven miles northwest of Armentieres on the road which parallels the Hazebrouck Railway.

Enormous masses of men have been employed by the Germans, and in his official dispatches to the British War Office last night Field Marshal Haig said that 10 German divisions had been identified along the 125-mile battle front since the mighty combat began on March 21.

PRESSURE ON BAILLEUL.

At the beginning of the war it was reckoned that a German division consisted of 20,000 men. Since that time, on account of their heavy losses, the Germans have reduced the size of their divisions, and it is now estimated that a division includes about 12,000 bayonets.

"Strong pressure was maintained by the Germans all day Friday south and southwest of Bailleul," said the night report of the British War Office. "Constant attacks have been made in this area, and they are still continuing. British troops have been pressed back slowly in continuous fighting to positions in the neighborhood of the Bailleul railway, where they are now heavily engaged with the enemy. Bitter fighting occurred also on other parts of the front, north of La Bassee Canal, where the enemy was able to make slight progress between the Lawe and Clarence rivers. At other points our positions have been maintained.

"Over 110 German divisions so far have been engaged since the beginning of the battle on March 21. Over forty of these divisions have been thrown into the fighting two or three times."

It was not until Friday that the Germans claimed the capture of Armentieres, although the British evacuated it on Wednesday evening.

BRITONS PRAISED BY FOE.

The night report of the German War Office said:

"Our victorious troops are progressing through the wide Lys River plain lying between Armentieres and Merville."

The British soldiers defending Armentieres fought so bravely that they won even the praise of the German War Office. The official report said that the garrison of 2,000 men and 50 officers only laid down their arms after the most desperate resistance.

Map indicating the German attempt to widen the salient driven into the British line between Messines and La Bassee. The tip of the northerly salient shows Merville, to which the Teutons advanced in a three-mile drive, and their closest point of approach to the channel, Dunkirk being but 27 miles distant. One of the arrows points to Festubert, where the British have just advanced their lines and taken some prisoners. The other arrow shows Hangard-en-Santerre on the Picardy front, taken by the Germans, but retaken by British and French forces. Noyon, west of which town the French captured a number of prisoners and machine guns, is shown in the lower part of the southerly and larger salient. The smaller map gives in detail the Armentieres section.

FOCH MUST ACT AT ONCE, U. S. EXPERTS SAY

U. S. Reinforcements Now Believed to Be Fighting With the British

By JOHN EDWIN NEVIN,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, April 13.—General Foch must take the offensive at some point on the western front within forty-eight hours, if the situation in extreme northern France is to be saved. Military experts today were certain of this. They declared that the latest order of Field Marshal Haig, commanding the hard-pressed British forces that are blocking the Hun way to the channel, mean s that his situation is most serious.

It means that he has pressed all of his reserves—and these are believed here to include the American army sent to his aid by General Pershing—into service. Every gun and every man of the British forces in France is now being utilized to hold back the Germans.

And General Haig's ringing words, "Every position must be held to the last man; there must be no retirement" have stirred Washington to its depths. There is no one who doubts that this will be done. But it also is equally certain that the pressure must be lessened and the United States is relying on General Foch, the French generalissimo, to do this. How he will act is not considered of consequence. It must be at once, military experts say. And they are watching the entire battle line for the first indication of the French advance which will carry the battle directly to the German hordes.

106 HUN DIVISIONS.

Hindenburg has thrown 106 divisions into the fray, according to General Haig's address to his army. Entente and American experts here, familiar with the situation, believe that no less than fifty more that can be called on, although it is not known here just how available they are to the present battle line.

But that they will be brought up unless Foch acts promptly is certain, and there is now no doubt left anywhere in Washington that the German plan is to crush the British army at all costs and fight its way to the coast if possible.

The last lingering doubt of this was dissipated when the word came through Swiss and Danish sources that there was increasing activity in the German naval bases, especially at Kiel and about Heligoland.

The German fleet is simply a division of the German army. It has been held like other reserves for the moment when the high command believed that it could be utilized to the greatest extent. That moment seems today to be approaching fast, and there will be no surprise here over receipt of the word at any moment that the fleet is out.

MAY USE THE FLEET.

It may be used in an effort to cover the landing of a German army behind Haig's lines. It may be used to try to cover the landing of a force in Britain. It may be used in an attempted general sea raid. But, wherever it is used, it will have to cover well. The British grand fleet, which now is reinforced, Secretary of the Navy Daniels has let it be known, by many first line American fighting craft, including battleships. This means that the long-looked-for naval battle must materialize unless at the last moment the German plans are changed.

As the battle in France and Flanders developed Washington watched closely for the first word of America's part in it. Every section of the nation is represented in the men who now are supporting the British in the north. The flower of the regular army, certain National Guard and National Army units are on the ground. And while the losses must be very great, it is believed that the morale of those engaged will have a wonderfully stiffening effect everywhere, but especially here at home.

Not since the battle of the Marne has the German war machine possessed the force that it now is showing. Consequently the entente must sacrifice men as prodigally as the enemy to maintain the positions beyond which a retreat would mean a most serious disaster.

"PEACE BY AUGUST."

There is now positive information in possession of the United States and the entente that the German plans are to force a complete issue with the present battle. The Kaiser, Hindenburg and Von Ludendorff have decreed that the "German peace made by the sword" shall come by August.

Their plans—which incidentally have not taken into consideration the Supreme War Council—call for the complete crushing of the British army, establishment of the positions on the coast from which the British territory, and especially London, can be shelled with super-guns, and a new movement against Paris when this is finished.

And, realizing these objectives, the entente is taking the necessary steps to meet them. That is the reason for the Haig order of the day, which will go down into history with the ringing words of the French at the Battle of the Marne.

HAVANA FOUND TO BE BASE FOR HUN SPIES

By GEORGE GARVIN,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, April 13.—The German espionage headquarters for this hemisphere has at last been definitely located in Havana, Cuba. The United States secret service, it was learned here today, has finally rounded it up. The principal agents operating from it are Latins, directed by Germans. A number of the leaders are already under surveillance.

Working with officials of the Cuban government, secret service agents now have about ended the usefulness of the Havana clique. Key West, Tampa, and New York have been found the principal operating points in the United States of these Latin spies.

When the Lansing exposure of German-Swedish intrigue in Mexico was made, the death knell of German espionage in Mexico was sounded. Up to that time German agents had no difficulty in transmitting their reports through the Southern republic, but when it was apparent the United States was aware of their activities there a new base was found necessary.

Although Cuba is an ally of the United States, it was found possible to establish an espionage clearing house there.

For a time the Latin agents working from the states were practically unhampered, but a letter that fell into the hands of a branch of the secret service proved their undoing. The letter was from a Latin in New York and was directed to a commercial house in Havana. It contained, ostensibly, an order for a consignment of clocks. Under scrutiny, however, it was revealed as a code message. The cipher was discovered and the "order" was found to read as follows:

"United States has established transport sailing point at ——" giving the name of a port which really had been made fit embarkation port.

Investigation in New York and Havana revealed the identity of many of the agents and all were placed under surveillance. Several are now in custody and more are being gathered in.

The mails were the principal medium of communication between the States and Havana. The information from there was forwarded to Spain and then wirelessed direct to Berlin.

Bay State Fighters Up in Front, Says Serg. Gilbody

War honors which are being gathered by Bay State boys in France are emphasized in a letter received in Boston today from Sergeant-Major George F. Gilbody of the 101st Infantry, American Expeditionary Forces, a former member of the Boston AMERICAN staff. Gilbody wrote:

"The whole gang of Bay Staters here are full of fight to the core. So far we have been decorated with twelve Croix de Guerre and Citations of the Armies, which is 'going some' and is hardly believable in the eyes of the French authorities. Everybody is quite well and has been, right along, which is quite a tribute to our Bay State manhood.

"We have been right up on the front line since February 5 and expect to pull out for a much-deserved rest the last of this week—about Saturday, the 17th."

The letter was dated March 12.

BOMB PARIS AND ENGLAND FROM THE AIR

London, April 13.—German air squadrons made two night raids, one on Paris and the other on the east coast of England. Eleven persons were killed in the Paris raid and fifty were injured.

The first Paris statement on the raid said that only two of the Hun planes succeeded in flying over Paris, that a few bombs were dropped and that the danger period, between fire warning and the "all clear" signal, lasted thirty minutes.

Official announcement was made by the British War Office today that German aircraft crossed the eastern coast and that one of them penetrated almost to the northwestern coast, Bombs were dropped mostly in the open country.

Five persons were killed and fifteen injured. It was officially announced this afternoon.

5 SHOT AS AUTO CHASES SOLDIERS

By International News Service.

New York, April 13.—A woman and four men, one a policeman, were shot by soldiers at Hollis, Queens borough, early this morning.

Several soldiers were arrested later in the vicinity of Hillside avenue, Hollis, by a searching party of nearly one hundred police reserves and were taken to the Jamaica police station to be questioned. At St. Mary's the woman was identified as Miss Edna Brush, living in Huntington, L. I. She was shot in the right breast and is seriously wounded.

GERMAN SONGS BARRED FROM CITY SCHOOLS

"Die Wacht Am Rhine," a song which is popular in Germany, is no longer sung in Boston public schools, Superintendent Dyer stated today.

It has been placed in the category of things unfitted for children to know, and any teacher who asks that it be sung will be suspected of being treasonably inclined.

"Im Vaterland," another popular German work, which has been a part of the regular school courses in the language of the Huns, has also been banned, the superintendent said. It was a textbook of folklore and stories of life in Germany under the benefacent incumbencies of the Kaiser's predecessors.

OMITTED FROM COURSE.

"It was a year ago," said Mr. Dyer, "that we first sent out word that anything that might advance the principles of autocracy should be left out of the school rooms. No definite ruling was made then, but we had no complaints, and when we investigated the other day we found that most of the teachers had voluntarily discontinued the singing of the 'Watch on the Rhine.'

"We have ordered the omission of 'Im Vaterland' from the regular school courses in German, too, just to make sure. We cannot, of course, be absolutely sure of the personal feelings of all of our teachers, but we know that none of them would willingly and malignantly do anything to cause trouble in this way.

"We can't help knowing this," continued Dr. Dyer, "because with several thousand pupils in the school we would have been sure to have had some sort of a complaint if any one of them had been offended.

"The ruling was only a matter of form, for we have had a regular committee in the school department here to 'censor' the material that we use. Of course, we write new text books, of course, but we don't have to use the parts of them that might make wrong impressions on the minds of the children.

WATCH HISTORY LESSONS.

"It isn't only the German text books that we have to look out for," the superintendent concluded.

Even classes in German are shrinking into insignificance. French and Spanish are taking its place, and only those who need the subject for college entrance or some other unavoidable need are taking it.

"We have to look out for the history books. History is very popular in the schools now, and there are lots of bills that think it might hurt the children, or at any rate, hurt their feelings.

"Their feelings are very susceptible, especially on the German propaganda subjects. If there were anything at all, we would have heard of it without a doubt. We are sure that all is well, and now that we have made the new ruling, absolutely forbidding the use of any material that is not the sort to inspire patriotism, we cannot have any trouble about it."

ing to a Washington dispatch. The Washington total for the nation includes only the actual subscriptions which have been reported through the Federal reserve banks, and upon which the initial payments have been made. It was pointed out that there are millions of pledges still to be heard from, together with the report of the Minneapolis district.

ONE-SIXTH SUBSCRIBED.

With the campaign one-fourth over and more than one-sixth of the minimum known to be actually subscribed in eleven districts, treasury officials today were highly optimistic as to the final outcome. It was pointed out that the closing hours of past campaigns have been the big ones, and that neither of the preceding two had received so auspicious a start.

The total number of individual subscribers represented by today's New England figure is 58,726. This is approximately 13,000 more individual subscriptions than was reported yesterday.

GUARD AGAINST SLACKENING.

The present campaign, which ends May 4, has twenty-three more days to go.

With $159,000,000 yet to be raised to complete New England's quota of $250,000,000 in the remaining twenty-three days of the campaign, an average total of approximately $8,250,000 a day will be required.

The present rate of subscriptions must be accelerated a bit every day in order to come out ahead on the closing day, May 4. All Liberty Loan workers are urged to throw themselves unreservedly into the work of the campaign, as no slackening of effort can be tolerated if New England is to go over the top within the allotted period.

The detailed report for today was:

| | Active Banks. | Reports Missing. | Fifth Day. | Total. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Maine— | 155 | 34 | $780,000 | $3,889,000 |
| New Hampshire— | 86 | 25 | 282,000 | 2,443,000 |
| Vermont— | 90 | 46 | 133,000 | 1,793,000 |
| Rhode Island— | 45 | 5 | 1,234,000 | 6,117,000 |
| Connecticut— | 137 | 24 | 1,184,000 | 10,928,000 |
| Massachusetts— | 331 | 58 | 4,417,000 | 36,022,000 |
| | 844 | 192 | 8,030,000 | 61,192,000 |

Among the subscriptions received today were:

City of Worcester, sinking fund, $100,000; city of Fitchburg, sinking fund, $20,000; town of Millis, $3,000; town of Clinton, $2,000; city of Waltham, trust funds, $6,000; city of Attleboro, sinking fund, $6,000; city of Attleboro, sewer assessment investment fund, $4,000.

Six more towns in New England reported to the Liberty Loan Honor Flag Committee this morning that they had exceeded their quotas and were entitled to Honor Flags. This makes a total of 106 towns asking honor flags.

The new towns, with their quotas, are: Hudson, $138,300; New Salem, $4,000; Woodstock, Ct., $22,000; Broad Brook, Ct., $12,500; Montville, Ct., $42,000 and Danbury, N. H., $5,700. This makes 106 in all for the New England district.

Montville's (Connecticut) record seems to qualify it for a first blue star, representing 100 per cent. over-subscription, for it has subscriptions today amounting to $88,500 against a quota of $43,000. The individual subscriptions include: C. M. Robertson Company, $10,000, Uncasville Manufacturing Company $20,000, Palmer Bros. Company and stockholders $15,000, Mrs. R. H. Melcer $15,000, W. H. Reeves, trustee, $15,000.

New Salem has yet failed to meet the requirements of 2 per cent of population, its total of $4,000 coming from four subscribers only.

MANY SUNDAY RALLIES.

At the opening of the art exhibit of the Brookline Civic Society at the Brookline Public Library, tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock, Ernest B. Dane will speak briefly about the work of the Brookline Public Safety Committee, and will boom the third Liberty Loan.

The Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities has been offered a substantial gift through one of its endowment funds, provided the members of the society raise the remainder, and the board of trustees has voted to put the entire sum into Liberty Bonds. The members subscribing thus far raised $8,000. There is $7,000 more needed.

Liberty loan meetings tomorrow are: Boston, Hippodrome Theatre, Tremont street, 7:30 p. m., William H. Kenney, speaker; Old North Church, Salem street, 10:45 a. m., Captain Louis Keene, speaker; Norwood, 3:30 p. m., George B. Glidden; Lowell, Polish Home Association, 10 Coburn street, 2:30 p. m., Rev. Johnson; Boston, Municipal Building, Oak and Tyler streets, 8 p. m., W. C. Youngjohn.

MRS. DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS, WHO BARES HEART WOE

By International News Service.

New York, April 13.—Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks, in a statement made regarding her marital infelicities, accused her movie star husband of "not playing the game," and declared she would furnish the public with proofs of her claims if her husband or "the woman I can name" fails to make a statement within the next few days. Mrs. Fairbanks was clearly disturbed over her husband's denial of her assertion that they had separated.

"If no statement is made within the next few days either by the woman I can name as the party responsible for my separation from my husband, or by my husband, I shall verify my own statement by proofs," said Mrs. Fairbanks.

"His 'German propaganda' reply to the statement I have been forced to make was not quite playing the game. I did not speak until matters passed the point of endurance. I am ready to prove every assertion I have made. I will make public the proofs if there is no statement forthcoming from the individuals most involved.

"My husband is quoted as saying, in Detroit, that there are no differences between us. He said he meant to talk to me over the long distance telephone. He has not telephoned me, nor has he tried to communicate with me since he left New York. He is trying to bluff it all along a little further.

"The whole affair is not pleasant. But I do insist that there should be some honesty of acceptance in the situation as it now stands, and this should apply equally to all parties concerned."

Loan Sidelights

Among the larger subscriptions reported by the women's Liberty Loan committees are Chelmsford, Mrs. George W. Day, chairman, thirty subscriptions, $7,500; Dalton, Mrs. Frank Cleveland, eight, $4,900; Fall River, Miss Anna H. Borden, three, $3,200; Greenfield, Mrs. C. N. Stoddard, 116, $21,400; Hingham, Miss Susan B. Willard, seven, $3,650; Holyoke, Mrs. William G. Dwight, sixty-four, $7,000; Lawrence, Mrs. Malcolm E. Peabody, sixty-seven, $6,500; Millers Falls, Mrs. D. E. Mathewson (five days) thirty-seven, $4,750; Monson, Mrs. Robert Cushman, five, $1,250; North Adams, Mrs. Murray Sanford, $8,800; Norwell, Mrs. A. W. Sylvester, one, $5,000; Salem, Mrs. John M. Raymond, Mrs. Alden P. White, twenty-six, $4,550; Tauton, Mrs. Harry Carlow, thirty-eight, $28,200; Wareham, Mrs. S. C. M. Packard, one, $2,000; Webster, Mrs. F. I. Sears, (three days) 120, $8,000; Worcester, Mrs. Homer Gage, sixty-three, $51,200.

In Hudson, though the women did not begin their canvass until today, Mrs. James H. Hancock, chairman, reports twenty subscriptions with a total of $1,200.

Mrs. S. F. Clarke, chairman for Williamstown, reports that the men's committee has decided on a drive for one week, April 17-24, and asked the women's committee to conduct it.

Five banks of Newport, R. I. reported subscriptions to the Third Liberty Loan for Friday of $63,850, making a total for the week up to that time of $712,450 for the Newport district. The town of Middletown, R. I., has exceeded its quota of $15,000 having subscribed $25,000. Governor Beeckman has subscribed $250,000 for which Newport will be credited.

The National Exchange Bank and the Newport Savings Bank have subscribed $100,000 each. Newport's allotment is $1,350,000.

In behalf of the Third Loberty Loan drive, the presidents and secretaries of the leading Lithuanian organizations throughout the entire South Boston district are planning a meeting to be held at Municipal Building on East Broadway at 7:30 p. m. Monday evening, April 15. The speakers will be John Karosas, editor of the Lithuanian tri-weekly Darbininkas; Kasimer Sidlauskas, A. F. Kneizis, M. Venis and a representative from the mass committee on citizens of foreign birth or descent.

McCALL TO VIEW PARADE FROM STATE HOUSE

Rfused to Use Stand on Common, and Chairman of Loan Committee Assents

Governor McCall wins in his controversy with members of the New England Liberty Loan Committee and will review the military parade next Friday from a stand in front of the State House. The Governor declined to break precedent by using a stand on the Common facing Tremont street, as desired by N. P. Hallowell, chairman of the committee.

In a communication to the Governor, Mr. Hallowell states that the State House stand will be the only one from which the parade will be reviewed. He invites Governor McCall to extend invitations to Rear Admiral Wood, Major-General Hodges and Captain William R. Rush, commandant of the navy yard, to review the parade from the stand. This will be done.

Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels, Mayor Peters and members of the loan committee will see the parade from the same place.

The route is from Commonwealth avenue to Hereford street, along the north side of Commonwealth to Arlington, to Beacon to School to Washington to Temple place to Tremont to Boylston to Park square.

One of the things that caused the committee to decide in favor of the State House stand is the fact that under the army rules and regulations, which must be lived up to by all officers, a Governor in his own State receives all honors due a general at military affairs. As such, Governor McCall will be the ranking official at Friday's demonstration.

$17,205,200 IN DAY FOR LOAN IN NEW YORK

New York, April 13.—The sale of Liberty bonds in the New York district showed an overnight gain of $17,205,200 according to an announcement today by the local Liberty Loan committee. Total subscriptions in the New York district now amount to $233,765,300.

MRS. SARTORIS MUST EXPLAIN FRENCH FUND

New York Prosecutor Investigates Money Deals in Which Baylis Also Figures

By International News Service.

New York, April 13.—Assistant District Attorney Edwin P. Kilroe has announced, according to a story published in The American, that he would summon Mrs. Cecile Sartoris and other executives of the French Restoration Fund, with headquarters in Aeolian Hall. Mrs. Sartoris is the wife of Captain Algernon Sartoris, grandson of former President Ulysses S. Grant. Mr. Kilroe said:

"I want Mrs. Sartoris and her four associate executives to explain to me the necessity for raising an administrative fund of $30,000 or of $40,000 from the public by benefits and private subscriptions.

"I shall also expect definite information as to the work being done for the fund by Rev. Charles T. Baylis. He was thrice indicted in 1916 for larceny in connection with funds he raised as director general of the Allies' Hospital Relief Commission. I have been told he has recently accompanied Mrs. Sartoris on a tour of other cities where funds were pledged."

MONEY TURNED OVER TO ENVOY.

The four associate executives of the French Restoration Fund named upon its stationery are: Jean Wick (Mrs. Perry Adams), Rowland Hill, James Halsted and Captain Achmed Abdullah.

Mrs. Sartoris told reporters on Thursday that the proceeds of concerts given by the Paulist Choristers at Carnegie Hall and elsewhere ostensibly for her fund had not been turned over to her. This, she explained, was due to the fact that the choristers would not permit an audited statement to be made.

In regard to this Mr. Kilroe declared:

"The proceeds of the Carnegie Hall concert by the Paulist Choristers, about $1,500, were turned over to the French ambassador, because I directed that they be withheld from Mrs. Sartoris and turned over to the ambassador.

"I sent for Mrs. Sartoris some time ago. She was reported to be too ill to appear and I consented to have her counsel, a Mr. Beach, come to see me. I told him that the matter was being investigated.

HAD A BOSTON END.

"He explained that the French Restoration Fund was practically without an organization of capable executives, and I told him that the safe way to get money for French relief to France was to turn it over directly to the ambassador. Then I sent for the sister of Father Finn, director of the Paulist Choristers, and after receiving interesting information from her I told them to turn the money over to the French diplomat.

"Later some trouble developed at Boston. I was informed Mrs. Sartoris appeared while the choristers were there and that some attempt was made to attach the funds."

Mr. Kilgore stated that he wanted "a great deal of information" before a proposed benefit is given for the fund under direction of Mrs. Sartoris at the Harris Theatre on April 23. A publicity director has been engaged, he says, by Mrs. Sartoris in connection with the benefit.

The AMERICAN learned last night that the French Restoration Fund has been refused admission to the Bulletin of Approved War Relief Organizations, issued regularly by the Charity Organization Society. One requirement for admission is the control of the society's affairs by "a responsible and active directing board holding regular meetings."

NOTED BEAUTY OF HARTFORD GETS DIVORCE

Mrs. Estelle J. McCreary, who eloped from Hartford to Portland in 1912 and whose photograph won the first prize for beauty at the convention of the Photographers' Association of New England, held at Boston, has been awarded a divorce at Hartford from Frederick E. McCreary on the ground of desertion.

Mrs. McCreay testified that her husband went to Cornell to gain more education and wrote her last summer that he had met another woman for whom he cared more than he did for his wife, so he was not going to return to his Hartford home.

Mrs. McCreary was formerly Lillian J. Lamb, daughter of Lieutenant Colonel Edwin E. Lamb of Hartford, who is now with the 102d Infantry in France.

She was considered the most beautiful girl in Hartford. After her elopement and marriage at Portland she and her husband lived in Hartford. McCreary was employed in the office of a large insurance company. He was not satisfied, however, with his earnings, his wife testified, and gave up his work to go to college.

Mrs. McCreary said her husband left Hartford on May 9, 1914, to go to Cornell. She did not know his present location.

Mrs. McCreary's divorce suit was not contested. She was awarded the custody of her little daughter.

She lives with her mother at No. [illegible] South Beacon street, Hartford, and supports herself and her child by [illegible] work.

BOND RALLIES FOR NORTH END ITALIANS

Open air meetings are to be held at various points in the North End at 6 and 9 p. m. today to stimulate interest among Italians in the Liberty Loan campaign. Sunday, April 21 at 2:30 p. m. a mass meeting at the Palace Theatre will be addressed by Judge Michael J. Murray, Senator James F. Cavanagh, Vittorio Orlandini, Ubaldi Guidi and Vincent Brogna. Thomas Nutile will preside. Work among Italian physicians is being directed by Rocco Brindisi and among the bankers by Gabriele Stabile.

White Bread but Wheatless; Here's the Recipe

By International News Service.

New York, April 13.—A white [illegible] wheatless bread has been [illegible] by Jean Birtsch, French [illegible] at the Hotel Vanderbilt, to meet the order of the Food Administration for wheatless products in all hostelries. The order goes into effect tomorrow.

Birtsch offers his new formula for Victory bread to bakers throughout the country. The recipe follows:

Twenty-five pounds rye flour, [illegible] pounds graham flour, 25 pounds [illegible] flour, 25 pounds crushed oatmeal, two dozen eggs, two pounds yeast, four pounds lard, four pounds sugar.

8 CHILDREN OF ENLISTED MAN IN WANT

Evicted from One Home—Mother Fears Red Tape Will Delay Aid Too Long

By ELIZABETH ELLAM.

George Jones is a patriot. He may even be a hero, later on. A slow, plodding family man, he heard the call for duty, and today he is on his way to "somewhere in France," with several thousand other George Joneses, all willing to die for the flag that others may live, protected by it.

Patriotism called loudly—so loudly that it entirely drowned out of the concert a chorus of eight shrill little voices, and a pathetic ninth voice, of the mother of those eight little children. So George Jones never heard the call of the nine at home, and he still marched on, buoyed up by cheers, and speeches and more patriotism.

SON WENT, TOO.

And that same clarion voice was heard, too, by George Jones, Junior, who is in the navy. On the briny deep, in his swinging hammock, George Jones, Junior, is sleeping sleeping peacefully each night, undisturbed by nightmares of that mother and his eight little brothers and sisters, evicted from a tenement because they cannot pay the rent, penniless and without any means of support save the $6 that little Mary Jones brings home each Saturday night for her work as a bundle girl.

Such is the tragedy of the Jones family, the little tale told me by Mrs. Jones when I went to see her in her new home that she has found on Harrison avenue, and where, with her eight children around her, she is fighting to keep a very real wolf—the gaunt, stalking wolf of hunger—from the door.

STORY SIMPLY TOLD.

Mrs. Jones told her story in a simple, straightforward way. "My boy has been gone a year in the navy," she said, "and after I told him that I needed some money from him, he said he had made an allotment to me. When the money did not come, I sent to Washington. They told me that it was correct and that I had been allotted half of his pay last December. It was all regular and on record. But I haven't got the money. Washington seems so slow.

"And then my husband. I don't think it was right for him to leave us. I think we needed him more than his country did. He was always a quiet, home-loving man until he began to go up on the Common, hearing those speeches, and then he decided to leave us. He went to Fort Myer, but I suppose by now he is on the way to France, for I haven't heard from him lately. I thought I would get half of his pay right off, and that would help me. He told me so, but they tell me at Red Cross headquarters that I cannot get any of it for three months.

A THREE WEEKS' WAIT.

"Then I went to the State House and asked for aid there. And they told me that I could get State aid, but that it would take three weeks before it would come through!

"How am I going to get along, what am I going to feed my children on for those three weeks? The Red Cross is helping me now some, but yesterday the money all gave out, and today we're just eating on strings. We won't have any more until Mary gets her $6 tomorrow night."

BOY TEARS OUT KAISER: 40 CENTS, SAYS TEACHER

Because ten-year-old John Beckwith tore a picture of the Kaiser from two geographies, Principal Eugene Flood of the Ballard School, Saugus, has ordered the boy's mother to pay the town forty cents.

The woman, Mrs. John Beckwith of No. 38 Chestnut street, Saugus, who is a widow with four children, has appealed for assistance to Mrs. Elizabeth Gregg, head of the Neighborhood House, Lynn.

The principal is said to have discovered the Beckwith boy's act when reprimanding another boy for some slight infraction of rules. The pupil then declared that others had acted worse than he, and gave John Beckwith's name. It is said that an investigation of Mr. Flood's action will be made.

ARLINGTON BOY HURT IN CANADIAN SERVICE

Mrs. Joseph McLatchy, No. 14 Melrose street, Arlington, has received word that her son Harry is in the hospital suffering from multiple gunshot wounds, at Ottawa Point, Canada. He has served in the Canadian forces three years, and has been gassed once and wounded three times. He holds a gold medal as champion lightweight fighter of the Canadian Army.

FLORODORA GIRL IN NEW DIVORCE TANGLE

Mabel Gould Newbury Defendant in Suit by Taunton Clubman

Taunton, April 13.—Thompson Newbury, local clubman and son of the late Charles T. Newbury, today entered suit for divorce against Mabel Gould Newbury of Newport, R. I., naming Corporal William J. Duggan of Camp Devens, [illegible], as [illegible] co-respondent.

This is the second action in which Mrs. Newbury, a member of the original Florodora sextet, has figured, as she was granted a divorce in 1910 from Harold Dean Stickney, also a Taunton society man.

The Newbury and Stickney families have been leaders in local society for years. The late Charles T. Newbury was head of the Taunton Oil Cloth Works and was one of the most widely known business men in southeastern Massachusetts.

The libel filed today in the Bristol County Court through the firm of Choate, Hall & Stuart, Boston attorneys, specifies acts of infidelity. A motion was allowed to amend the libel and name Duggan, who is a Taunton boy and a member of Company F, 302d Field Artillery.

Mrs. Newbury was originally Mabel Gould Slocum of New York, who attained considerable fame on the stage because of her beauty. She was taken up by wealthy Summer residents of Newport and posed as a model for a number of society painters. She also appeared in fetes and Summer theatricals at the fashionable resort.

It was here she met Harold Dean Stickney, whose mother, Mrs. Sutherland Orr, is one of the social arbiters of Taunton. The couple were married on October 27, 1904, and lived in New York and Newport for a time, after which they returned to Taunton. They entertained lavishly and appeared happy, but on January 14, 1910, Mrs. Stickney was granted a divorce on the ground of cruel and abusive treatment.

This became absolute on July 14, 1910, and on June 24, 1911, she married Thompson Newbury. The Newburys also lived in Taunton and were prominent in society. Some time ago they became estranged and since that time Mrs. Newbury has been making her home in Newport.

CANADIAN SOLDIER TO ADDRESS NEWTON CHURCH

Evening services at Trinity Church, Newton Centre, tomorrow will be marked by an address by Lieutenant Harry B. Milsom of the Canadian Army. Lieutenant Milsom enlisted on the first call for Canadian volunteers, went across with the expeditionary troops as a private, served for twenty-seven months in France and Flanders, won all his promotions under fire, and was both wounded and gassed. He was also one of the best riders in the Canadian Army and was only defeated by a Belgian in the high jumping contest between the best riders of the Allied armies.

He fought on the front where the battle is now being waged, and has a story to tell which brings our part in the war straight home to us. Lieutenant Milsom is quite an eloquent and fascinating speaker, who has addressed the largest audiences in Canada and the United States.

H. K. BUSHNELL EXPIRES SUDDENLY AT AGE OF 79

Henry K. Bushnell, for thirteen years a bookkeeper in the circulation department of the AMERICAN, died suddenly today at his home, No. 620 Dudley street, Dorchester.

Mr. Bushnell, who was seventy-nine years old, appeared in the best of health when he arose today and prepared to go to the office. A short time later he passed away.

He was known as one of the original "Old Boston Boys." He was an athlete in his younger days and played baseball when the ball was caught without gloves.

Before coming to the AMERICAN Mr. Bushnell was employed by the Herald for more than thirty years.

DR. POLING ON WAY HOME FROM WAR FIELD

A cablegram has been received from Daniel A. Poling, LL. D., who has been spending a month with the American troops in France as the representative of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, stating that he had sailed for home. Dr. Poling was in the front line trench when the American soldiers had their first baptism of German gas. He wore his mask. Later he was under shell fire while assisting to carry a wounded German soldier to the hospital.

Dr. Poling will address a mass meeting in Tremont Temple, Tuesday evening, April 23.

URGES HOMES FOR QUINCY SHIP WORKERS

Mayor Whiton of Quincy was in Washington today to try to persuade government officials to allot $3,000,000 to Quincy to house the men who are building ships at the Fore River yards and who have no suitable accommodations. It is planned to erect four large dormitories, accommodating 1,500 men, and 500 cottage houses for married men and their families. Government officials who have been [illegible] over the site at Quincy Point pronounce it satisfactory.

STATE FLAG CARRIED WITH HONOR IN FRANCE

"It was carried with pride on the first formal review of the regiment on foreign soil. It will be brought back, I hope, to Massachusetts with the same pride and I believe with great honor for the State." These are the closing sentences of a letter received by Gov. McCall from Col. George H. Shelton, commanding the 104th U. S. Infantry in France in thanking him for the State flag sent to the regiment.

Prize for Patriotic Play Awarded to Brookline Girl

Miss Doris F. Halman of Brookline, awarded $250 prize as writer of a patriotic play.

Word has been received by Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] Halman of No. [illegible] Webster street, Brookline, that the second prize of $250 has been awarded to their daughter, Miss Doris F. Halman, in a patriotic play competition. Miss Halman, who has written poetry since she was eight, presented a three-act play, "The Land Where Lost Things Go." First prize was not awarded.

The third prize of $100 went to Miss Rachel L. Field, Eliot Hall, Shepard street, Cambridge, for a one-act play, "Rise Up, Jennie Smith." The Drama League adds that the latter is a Liberty Loan play and is being submitted for use in the present campaign. There were 119 plays entered.

Miss Halman graduated from Brookline High School in 1913 and since graduating from Radcliffe College has devoted her time to writing plays, several of which have been produced.

LYNN MEN FINED FOR SLURRING BRITISH KING

Prisoners' Declaration That They Are Patriotic Fails to Move Judge

Arthur Hewis and Dougald Logan of Lynn were fined $10 each by Judge Lummus in Lynn Court today for calling King George of England a "four-flusher" and a "figure head."

The defendants admitted the words but protested that they were patriotic citizens. Judge Lummus said:

"There are men in the community, either fools or traitors, who claim that they are patriotic citizens and, at the same time, wish the defeat of our allies whose armies are now protecting us. If I were convinced that these defendants were of that sort I would sentence them to the limit."

Hewis is 34, Logan 27. They were arguing with two other men near the ticket window of the Lynn station of the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn Railroad last night. Railroad Officer Austin, overhearing the talk, arrested Hewis and Logan for disorderly conduct.

In court today the defendants pleaded guilty. Austin told the court he heard them call King George a "four-flusher" and say that the King was "only a figure head in the present war, whose only power was to sign papers."

Hewis and Logan declared they had both bought Liberty Bonds. Hewis said his children had bought Thrift Stamps and that he was a patriotic citizen. Logan said his parents were Scottish and that he was born in Trenton, N. J. They paid the fines.

80 MADE ILL AT DEER ISLAND BY FISH HASH

Official Report Reveals Epidemic of Ptomaine Poisoning Among Inmates

Poorly prepared fish hash caused an epidemic of ptomaine poisoning among the inmates at Deer Island, according to an official report made to Penal Institutions Commissioner David B. Shaw by Dr. Bernard McLaffigan, the resident physician.

In his report the doctor states that about eighty men reported to him for treatment and that over fifty of these men were obliged to remain in the hospital over night. Twenty-five returned for additional treatment the following morning. The report also states that in addition "a dozen or more [illegible] treatment in their rooms."

The fish hash was served at Wednesday noon. Coffee and bread were furnished with the hash.

Commissioner Shaw today said that a vigorous investigation was in progress to learn the direct cause and that on the strength of the doctor's report dismissal of at least one officer would follow.

REVEALED BY EX-INMATE.

The first outside knowledge that anything unusual had happened was when a discharged inmate informed the AMERICAN of the existing conditions. Investigation revealed the doctor's report, which follows:

"Hon. David B. Shaw, Penal Institutions Commissioner:

"Dear Sir: Yesterday afternoon we had an epidemic of mild ptomaine poisoning among the men who had eaten dinner in the old prison.

"There were about eighty who visited the hospital and fifty-one of these were kept over night, the others given treatment and returned to their rooms.

"Of the number held in the hospital, twenty-five were returned this morning much relieved. There were also a dozen or more who received treatment last night in their rooms.

"The cause of this epidemic was the taking of food that was faulty in preparation. The hash (fish) showed many hard and uncooked pieces of potatoes and many pieces of green and purple onions, which set in motion a chemical reaction. The odor of the hash was sweet and wholesome and looked good as a sample.

DEMANDS IMMEDIATE REPORT.

"The patients remaining in the hospital can further be reduced in numbers and I think tomorrow will show all recovered and back to work.

"Yours respectfully,
"BERNARD McLAFFIGAN,
"Resident physician."

Commissioner Shaw said that he was on the island the day the men were taken sick. He demanded an immediate report both from Master James Burke and the doctor. The following day these reports were made. Master Burke's report showed that he was making an investigation in order to place the blame.

MUSIC PLAYS BIG PART IN GRIFFITH PRODUCTIONS

The accompanying photograph of David Wark Griffith, the greatest motion picture director in the world today, seated in his laboratory at Los Angeles, Cal., consulting with Carli D. Elinor, his chief musical director, gives but a faint idea of the important part music plays in a Griffith master production. Boston admirers of Griffith, and all motion picture "fans" will have an opportunity to become better acquainted with the relationship of music to the screen when Mr. Griffith's latest triumph, "Hearts of the World," is placed on view at the Majestic Theatre, beginning next Tuesday evening.

So importantly is the music of this latest Griffith master film related to the unfolding story that there is not a single scene wherein the orchestra does not play its accompaniment. This is true even to the movement of a hand in several of the more dramatic moments, as well as in the scenes where British and French soldiers are seen "going over the top." Daily life in the French village where the greater portion of the story is laid finds its own expression in the quiet, soft, romantic tones of Mr. Elinor's score. Then when the modern inventions of present-day warfare are set forth, when the great, hulking tanks go careering awkwardly over enemy trenches, when lines of infantry move over vast spaces, and thousands of horses carry their riders into the very thick of the fight, the music, now compelling and thunderous, with all the Wagnerian depth and power, adds to the rapidly moving picture of real and terrible warfare.

It is not generally known that David Wark Griffith is a composer as well as a master director. Many of the beautiful themes in the score of "Hearts of the World" were worked out by him on the battlefields of France, where the bursting shells and the falling shrapnel gave the inspiration to the keenly receptive mind of Griffith.

Among girls summering along the North Shore are to "devote several hours of the day this Summer to raising vegetables, and they expect to be so successful as to be able to supply the Beverly Hospital with produce. It is to be a long season for the youthful farmerettes, beginning the first of May and continuing through until harvest time.

The STAGE

BY F. J. McISAAC

HOST OF GOOD THINGS HEADED THIS WAY

That week of opera by the Metropolitan which begins April 22 looms up more and more impressively as we study the repertory and the roster of artists.

Since the war destroyed the organizations of Milan, Munich, Paris, and Berlin, there has been no disputing the supremacy of the Metropolitan Opera of New York.

We all enjoyed the season given here by the Chicago Opera, but despite the presence of such stars as Galli Curci, Garden, Melba and Muratore in its ranks, Campanini's troupe is not in the same class with the Metropolitan as an organization.

In the first place the Metropolitan carries a chorus of 132, against about seventy for Chicago. The Metropolitan Orchestra is 100 strong and the finest band in the United States save only the Boston Symphony. The Chicago orchestra was less than seventy, and only fair in quality.

Chicago had one great tenor, the Metropolitan has four, Caruso, Martinelli, John McCormack, and Lazaro, the Spaniard who is singing the lyric roles this season.

Among the women Geraldine Farrar, Frieda Hempel, Margaret Matzenauer, Maria Jarrientos, and Claudia Muzio are great names. For baritones, Scotti, Amato and De Luca fill the bill. Jose Mardones, for years with the Boston Opera, is now leading bass of the Metropolitan and Didur and Rothier are still with the company.

The chair of Toscanini is now filled by Roberto Moranzoni, who was leading conductor of the old Boston Opera. Pierre Monteux, who conducted the Russian ballet last season, and Arthur Bodansky are the other conductors.

The repertory offers two revivals which are practical novelties, Meyerbeer's "Prophet," and Bellini's "Puritani," and a new Italian work called "Oracula," as well as the old favorites.

There is a probability of an extra matinee at which the ballet "Coq d'Or," in which Adolph Bolm, Marshall Hall, Rosini Galli and the Metropolitan Corps de Ballet will be performed, as well as Gilbert's "Dance in the Place Congo."

Some Clothes Horse.

When "So Long Letty" was seen at the Shubert a year or so ago, the curious little musical comedy laid in a beach colony made up of dwellers in abandoned street cars caught Boston right away, but the piece was whisked over to New York before it had settled into its stride. The return engagement with Charlotte Greenwood, Walter Catlett, Sidney Grant and May Boley, in fact all the original, ought to be successful.

Walter Catlett, the angular comedian, made a huge personal hit when Letty went to New York. Ziegfeld captured him and put him in the Follies and he enjoyed other engagements this season, but last week Morosco pounced upon him and thrust him back in his old part in "Letty." Catlett is one of the few really funny men in the business who is a Beau Brummel in appearance. I have it direct from the press agent that he is a maniac about clothes and particularly partial to violet colors. He has 114 red ties and twenty-seven cerise ones, there are mose than a hundred shirts in his wardrobe and he owns a score of suits of clothes, every one of them in checks or stripes.

What has this to do with drama, you ask?

Oh nothing. Just show why actors will have to borrow money to pay their income taxes, June first.

What's in a Name.

A good title is half the battle in the show business, and one which is inadequate or inaccurate is a very heavy handicap. The worst title I ever heard was "The Rape of Belgium," which suggested a motion picture. And when you saw the show which died at the Globe last week you discovered that the piece had nothing to do with Belgium, that the entire action occurred in Northern France. I understand it is to be revived next season with a new name, "Somewhere in France."

I don't think "A Country Cousin" is a good title for the play in which Alexandra Carlisle is appearing because it suggests hayseed in the hair and a dreadful visitation from the tall grass.

Now Booth Tarkington and Julian Street wrote this play at the Hollis and it is as punchy and popular in its appeal as "The Man from Home," which Tarkington wrote for William Hodge. It ought to be named something which would appeal to the people who read "The Man from Home," and that means everybody.

Critics might punch a few holes in "A Country Cousin," but the people who go to the theatre for entertainment whole heartedly and sincerely, certainly enjoy it. You can imagine the stout party with eyeglasses and teeth whose initials are T. R. getting so excited about it that he stood up in his seat when the curtain fell on the opening in New York and told the audience it was the best play he ever saw.

Alexandra Carlisle as Cousin Nancy is not boorish as Hodge was in "The Man from Home." She is demure when he was crude, quiet, ladylike, beautiful and gifted instead of being obviously self-made. The girl of the Corn belt usually gets a better education than the boy and that explains it. But she still contrasts vividly with the flashy and mean-souled denizens of the city, and you rejoice just as much when she puts it all over them as you did when Hodge pulverized the British aristocracy.

Another Griffith Superpicture.

We are to see the latest work of that screen magician David Wark Griffith much sooner than his previous achievements. "The Birth of a Nation" and "Intolerance." We waited many months after the New York showing for both of these, but through the well-known energy of Morris Gest, whose firm is handling "Heart of the World," this picture will be shown Monday at the Majestic, only a few days after its premier in New York.

This picture was made in the war zone by Griffith, who was specially privileged by the British government. Although it is not propaganda, the British government receives 60 per cent of the net profits for war work in return for the co-operation in the manufacture of the film of the British Army.

It is especially impressed that "Hearts of the World" is not primarily a war picture, since the love theme runs through it stronger than in any of his previous works. And yet it is said to contain the most dramatic war scenes ever filmed.

Costs Two Cents to Find Out.

If the Kaiser were permitted to witness and criticise James W. Gerard in "My Four Years in Germany," he probably wouldn't hesitate to say that Gerard was a bad actor, and from his point of view he would have been right.

But around the motion picture studios they declare that Gerard was the best natural actor who ever burst into the films. Certainly his work in the big picture which will be shown at Tremont Temple next week stamps him as one who would have a future in the movies.

They are telling a story about how Gerard was lured into pictures. The idea of making the most celebrated book in years into a film occurred to several producers but it didn't occur to them that Gerard would stand for it.

One well-known producer declared that he though he would and when the others laughed at him he declared stoutly:

"Well it only costs a postage stamp to find out."

He had so little hope that he sent no emissary other than a two-cent stamp and to his stupefaction he received a reply:

"I am interested. Tell me more about it."

One of the other producers hearing of it remarked, "My goodness, if I only sent a special delivery letter, I would have got him."

Another Tradition Gone Floo-ey.

There is a tradition in the show business that the public doesn't care much about mere stars on the stage. The idea is that the frugal Mr. and Mrs. Movie Goer don't see any reason why they should pay $2 to see a star in the flesh who is visible on the screen for a nickel, a half a dime, the twentieth part of a dollar, as the tallyhoo man says.

They quote the experience of John Bunny, now deceased. John was a whirlwind on the screen but a frost when some bad guesser took him for a tour. Mary Pickford, some years ago, was brought back to the legitimate for a few weeks without making much impression on the box office, and other experiments turned out badly.

It looks, though, as if Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew were going to upset the applecart of tradition. For Quiet Her Smiling" had a remarkably good first week and indications are that the movie fans are buying copiously.

It's a Sad Story, Mates.

After the opening of Sidney Drew in "Keep Her Smiling" by Wilbur Walton Tully, the producer, Sidney Drew, Jim Peeds, the general publicity agent for Tully and Booth, the author, had a supper party which lasted until the restaurants closed up.

Then they adjourned to Tully's apartment where they played poker until five in the morning, at which hour they left to get out the first of the morning papers. At 8 a. m. the quartet ventured into Boylston street, which Washington wrote for William Hodge. It ought to be named something which would appeal to the people who read "The Man from Home," and that means everybody.

Critics might punch a few holes in "A Country Cousin," but the people who go to the theatre for entertainment whole heartedly and sincerely, certainly enjoy it. You can imagine the stout party with eyeglasses and teeth whose initials are T. R. getting so excited about it that he stood up in his seat when the curtain fell on the opening in New York and told the audience it was the best play he ever saw.

Alexandra Carlisle as Cousin Nancy is not boorish as Hodge was in "The spent this fortune on the scion, thought he should become a learned physician, but Durand thought otherwise.

Durand was born in Paris, in a family well furnished with the means that bring ease and comfort. The favors of his parents and relatives were showered upon him throughout youth and early manhood. As a boy he had visited every capital in Europe and when in the early stages of manhood twice coursed around the globe.

In France the profession of the actor is an honorable one and a fine art. Durand, at the outset, gave himself heart and soul to the mastery of theatrical science. He soon developed into a character actor and during his career has portrayed the roles of Italian, French, Russian and Spanish characters.

He is a typical son of the Latin race, a good singer, wields the sword well and rides a horse as a true equestrian. His favorite author is Victor Hugo. He believes that stage folks should marry and is himself happily wedded to an American girl. "Why shouldn't marriage be universal just so long as there is love." Mr. Durand asserts.

SHUBERT THEATRE

At the Shubert Theatre Monday evening Oliver Morosco will present for the second time his successful musical farce, "So Long Letty" for a limited engagement.

The story of "So Long Letty" which was taken from Elmer Harris' "Your Neighbors Wife" and made into its present form by the original author and Mr. Morosco, deals in a humorous way with two families living in the Street Car Colony on San Francisco Bay.

The score is full of dash and some of the tunes remain with one, for instance "So Long Letty," "Beautiful Beach," "When I Fell In Love With You," "Here Come the Married Men" and "When You Hear Jackson Yodle On His Saxophone," are all of the whistling variety.

MAJESTIC THEATRE

The biggest event in the entire season in the world of motion pictures will be the presentation of D. W. Griffith's latest film masterpiece, "Hearts of the World," beginning next Tuesday, April 16, at the Majestic Theatre, under the management of William Elliott, F. Ray Comstock and Morris Gest.

"Hearts of the World" required eighteen months in the making, and many of the scenes were taken on the actual battlefields of France by Mr. Griffith, with the official aid and assistance of the British and the French governments. Mr. Griffith, however, is anxious to remove any apprehension that "Hearts of the World" is primarily a war picture. It is the story of love, primarily a love story, in which war figures as the background. In many respects it is "the story of a village," and far more than forty minutes during the exposition of the story, there is not a cannon shot, not a suggestion of war's alarms. There is the pretty romance of two girls in love, there is the quiet and peaceful atmosphere of a small French town before the holocaust of war. Then comes the conflict, with its ensuing effects upon the fortunes of those in the little village.

Mr. Griffith is anxious to have it understood that while "Hearts of the World" deals with war and love, it is a drama, he has stayed rather than colored in the French army, who a propaganda film. Let no one can sit through his wonderful pictorial representation of the tragedy of bleeding France, without going forth more determined than ever that the conflict MUST be won.

Prominent in the cast of "Hearts of the World" are the two beautiful Gish sisters, Lillian and Dorothy, Robert Harron, George Siguson, and other well-known players.

GERARD, TREMONT TEMPLE

In his book, "My Four Years in Germany," Ambassador James W. Gerard gave to the English-speaking world a document of vital import and unusual interest, primarily showing the reasons why America could do nothing else but go to war.

The motion picture adaptation which has been made, and which will be shown at Tremont Temple beginning Monday night next, April 15, and thereafter twice daily, afternoon and evening, gives to the screen the outstanding incidents of the book, visualizing perfectly scenes of the great struggle.

That the result is a huge success is best illustrated by the reception the film received on the occasion of the opening performance of an all-star engagement in New York city. A fairly typical audience cheered, shouted and applauded. Those present, as an observer states, were not displaying emotional hysteria. It was genuinely stirred enthusiasm, overpowering and unmistakable.

Practically the whole picture is concerned with the Ambassador's experiences in Germany from the time the war broke out in 1914 until the United States joined forces with the upholders of right against a distinctly formidable might, and it also shows the great part the one-time representative of 80,000,000 people played in these unsteady times when President Wilson was trying to keep out of the conflict.

Straight Tips on Shows That I Have Seen

By the Dramatic Editor.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE—Alexandra Carlisle in "The Country Cousin," a comedy by Booth Tarkington and Julian Street which is so wholesome and full of heart interest that you cannot help but like it.

PLYMOUTH THEATRE—"The Man Who Came Back," a vivid and imposing melodrama about a man who went the pace and reformed, which has made a great hit with the public.

WILBUR THEATRE—Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew in "Keep Her Smiling, a bright comedy with a theme which appeals to everybody.

PARK SQUARE THEATRE—"Cheating Cheaters," a clever comedy of thrills and mystery, by Max Marcin, which is a sure entertainer.

TREMONT THEATRE—Leo Ditrichstein in "The King," a clever adaptation from the French which gives this popular star a wonderful opportunity. Last week.

COLONIAL THEATRE—Last week of the big Cohan Review of 1918, headed by Nora Bayes. This ingenious musical entertainment has enjoyed great prosperity and departs because it must.

COPLEY THEATRE—"The Great Adventure," by Arnold Bennett, will be carried over for another week because of a determined demand.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE

The fairy godmother has again waved her magic wand and bills here has appeared on the vaudeville horizon a dazzling array of talent for the entertainment of B. F. Keith Theatre patrons next week. Gus Edward's Annual Song Revue will be the supreme feature of an all-star bill. Edward's name is a household word for the best in vaudeville girls productions. Kate Elinore and Sam Williams return to vaudeville after a successful tour at the head of their own company in a musical piece called "My Aunt From Utah." This couple are offering a new act entitled "Up-to-the-Minute and Then Some." Mignon, scarcely more than a child and billed as the Dainty Little Minnie, will offer her impersonations. In "Off and On" Flanagan and Edwards have a worthy successor to their former offering, "On and Off." Ralph Smalley has already established himself in the favor of Bostonians for his excellent work with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. For his current vaudeville appearance he will present a program of popular and classic numbers.

WALDRON'S CASINO

Next week Waldron's Casino will have something exceptional to offer as the visiting attraction will be the famous comedians, "Chilling" Burr Watson and the Burlesque Wonders Show. Watson has been made famous by that funny little side of his, which never fails to raise a laugh. This season he is backed by a production which is out of the ordinary, and is surrounded by a cast of high talents. The first act is entitled "Cafe De Graft" and the second "A Merry Mix Up." Mae Dix, is the pretty and dashing soubrette, and Katherine Pegge, the prima donna. Other well-known members of the cast are Gussie Martin, Hazel Josselyn, Nash Duffy and Fleg. Lulu Coates and her three Cracker Jacks. There is a lively and pretty chorus.

GAIETY THEATRE

When Jack Singer produced his latest burlesque novelty, "The Broadway Frolics," in which Leo Mascoll, the popular comedian is featured, he gave to theatregoers the very best entertainment that he has produced in his long career as a manager.

"The Broadway Frolics" will be the attraction all next week at the Gaiety Theatre.

It is a massive production and requires two sixty-foot baggage cars to transport the scenery.

"Grand Street" is the title used and the show is in two acts and eight scenes. A remarkable cast makes the production especially effective. Leo Mascoll, who is chief of the fun department, will be remembered for his excellent work in "Hello Paris" and the part that gives him ample opportunity to display his ability as a comedian. He is assisted by Wilbur Hall, as effective comedian; Eileen Sheridan is the prima donna. She is beautiful and possesses a most pleasing voice. Irene Baker is the soubrette.

TESTIMONIAL PERFORMANCE

Messrs. A. H. Woods, the producer of "Cheating Cheaters," and Peter F. & Co., owners of the Park Square Theatre, have kindly given their willingness to stage the performance Monday evening as a testimonial to James H. Kent and John D. O'Leary, the treasurer and ticket agent of the Theatre. Mr. Kent is one of the oldest in point of service of the box offices men in Boston, his service having been rendered in the old Boston Museum in the Montgomery Fields days, since then he has served at the Park and Colonial Theatres for a number of years. In all that time he has made hosts of friends who will be glad to have a chance of showing their appreciation of his many kindnesses.

CURTIN RETURNS

Dr. Thomas Curtin, who has gained wide fame through his remarkable book, "The Land of Dispensing Shadow" and as a special war correspondent for London papers since the beginning of the war, has been asked to give a second lecture on conditions as they are in Europe today, following the intense interest the Boston author created at his first appearance in Symphony Hall last week. Mr. Curtain comes to Symphony Hall again Tuesday evening, April 23rd.

METROPOLITAN OPERA WEEK

To fill in the great number of mail orders that have been sent in to the Opera House for seats for the eight performances of grand opera to be given by the Metropolitan Opera Company during the week of April 22. According to Treasurer Earl Lewis of the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, who is taking charge of the sale and is assisted by T. N. Wilkins and Harry H. Nelmes, this is by far the greatest response that has been made in the history of the Metropolitan in their visits to Boston. The heaviness of the public's appeal this week presages a thoroughly successful season. Some purchasers have been of the belief that there is a down town ticket office such as prevailed in other years, but such is not the case, all seats are at the Boston Opera House box office. All mail applications must be made payable to the Metropolitan Opera Company, and should contain the necessary 12 per cent. war tax.

LIEUTENANT O'BRIEN

At Tremont Temple this evening, at 8:15, Lieutenant "Pat" O'Brien, the famous American officer of the Royal Irish Corps of Rangers, will give his stirring lecture on his big battles in the air over the lines in France and describe his accompanying dare crawl through the lines of Germany.

Lieutenant O'Brien's lecture is really a narration of his adventures while flying in the air and on the ground behind the enemy's lines. It includes a description of the modern method of warfare, the last battle in which he was shot while nearly two miles up in the air, his fall and capture, his treatment at the hands of the Huns, his jump for freedom from the window of a speeding railroad train and the close calls from recapture that occurred during his flight, how it took him 30 days to cross and cross the high mountain wires guarding the Holland frontier.

This will probably be Lieutenant O'Brien's last appearance in Boston.

THE POPS

But three more pairs of Symphony concerts are to be given and then the remarkable season of 1917-1918, the thirty-seventh of the Symphony Orchestra will be ended. Following immediately on the Symphony season will come a nine weeks season of Pops. The Pops will begin Monday evening, May 6, and close Saturday evening, July 6. It is planned to revert to the original character that made the Pops, as to day, so popular for many years. In other words, soloists will not be employed, at least to any extent.

ST. JAMES THEATRE

Henry and Lee, the well known Hebrew comedians, will top the bill at Loew's St. James Theatre the first half of the week. They will present their latest skit for laughing purposes, "The Nuisance." The other acts on the bill include Lamb and Harper in their skit, "The Man and the Manicure"; the one-act play, "Between Showers," a rural comedy; Les Aristocrats, in dances, and Hanna and Burt, acrobatic comedians.

MOVIE STARS IN THE NEWS

Dong Fixes It.

For Douglas Fairbanks' newest comedy picture, "Mr. Fix-It," which will be given its first Boston showings throughout the coming week at the Beacon Theatre, a complete first floor of a palatial New York home of wealth, from dining room to library, was constructed. By the arrangement of the rooms in their proper order and advantage of the effective photographic angles was taken, and many scenes in which Mr Fairbanks takes athletic part are shown.

"Mr. Fix-It" is a comedy of the highest class in which the star expounds the theory of happiness for humankind, and his preachment is that one can only be happy in giving happiness to others. It is our practice in this palatial home, filled with fashionable people, that brings about many mirthful complications.

No Soh Sinh.

It's a tearless Mae Marsh in "The Face in the Dark," her latest photoplay made from the story of Irvin S. Cobb, which will be given its first Boston showing throughout the coming week. For the first time in two years of constant screen work she goes through a play without having to raise her handkerchief at frequent intervals to her eyes.

It doesn't follow that this photoplay is without good moments, in fact, Miss Marsh has one of the most appealing roles she has been called upon to portray. She has the role of a girl who has great things to accomplish. She has to make her way in the world alone, she must be strong, a girl without sentiment. Even when she enters a boarding school and is ignored by fellow students, her evident dissimilarity fails to bring tears. Nor does she weep when her fiance, a bank teller, is accused of a $10,000 theft.

"I welcomed the opportunity to go through a play without shedding tears," said Miss Marsh to an interviewer. "It feels good enough after six reels without sniffing. I don't mind playing scenes where tears are necessary, but it is a relief when I don't have to cry."

Newspaper Plots.

It takes an awfully good fiction writer to concoct a yarn as good as true stories which are appearing in the newspapers every day, and the film scenario writers in their search for material have begun to discover the file of newspapers covering a period of time contain enough for a six reeler.

"The Woman and the Law, which is shown next week at the Park is a picture built entirely of fact. The subject is the DeSaulles case. The wooing of a beautiful heiress in Chili by the dashing football player, their marriage, their home life, the gradual degeneration of the husband who finally comes to hate his wife and takes the child from her are all told graphically but not more so than they were developed in court. How the outraged wife finally shot her recreant husband, how she was tried for murder and acquitted by an American jury, fascinated by her beauty and her tragic story, these things make a whale of a picture and not a bit of imagination was required for the plot. It was all in the newspapers.

Nobody has interviewed Maurice Maeterlinck, the Belgian poet and philosopher about what he thinks of motion pictures, and it is a sure thing he didn't have the screen in mind when he wrote "The Blue Bird."

Nevertheless he taxed the resources of the stage very heavily with his fairy machinery in this play and only people with imagination and sympathy really appreciated what he was trying to do.

The motion picture offered a better chance for the mystical and miraculous and these figures of "The Blue Bird" are far more effective on the screen than they ever were on the stage. On the other hand the vandal director was not permitted to destroy the poetical side of the play, for Maurice Tourneur, the Frenchman who produced it for The Famous Players, is one of the most artistic directors in the world and thoroughly understood what Maeterlinck desired in "The Blue Bird." The very remarkable production goes on at the Orpheum next week.

Some Ape.

Thousands have read and marveled at Tarzan as he is portrayed by Edgar Rice Burroughs in his book, "Tarzan of the Apes," the screen version of which will begin a brief engagement at the Globe Theatre next Monday.

Elmo Lincoln, who plays the part of Tarzan in this film spectacle, when he first read it was given by Mr. Burroughs as too frail to live out the first year of his life.

When Lincoln was eight months old, in his home on Knob Hill, San Francisco, he was the victim of measlingitis, and it left him a weak, ensemble boy. Ten years later he enlisted with an uncle on board a sloop bound for the South Sea Islands. Two years later Lincoln returned to the port of San Francisco, robust and happy. At the age of eighteen he was the tallest and strongest man in California. Then he adopted acting as a profession and after numerous roles erased that of the two-sword man in Griffith's "Intolerance."

When the producers were seeking a man whose ability and physique would fit him for the difficult part of Tarzan, Lincoln was finally secured, but owing to a previous contract the production was delayed several weeks.

Lincoln is not fat. His 224 pounds are solid muscle. And with his huge bulk he is an alert, foxy racer. He has made his hundred yards in ten seconds flat at weight-throwing and shot-putting stands well up in amateur ranks.

GLOBE THEATRE

Monday afternoon there will begin at the Globe Theatre a brief engagement of a film spectacle that has been a sensation of recent months in New York. "Tarzan of the Apes," which is a screening of the widely read story of Edgar Rice Burroughs, a story of insistent appeal to all, for it is paraphrase to a startling degree of countless theory of Darwin concerning the descent of man. Whereas, it is no profound attempt to prove these theories, it is, nevertheless, a startling tale, for the author has woven into the plot a surprising number of ingredients, never before dreamed of in fiction, pictures that make an enthralling combination.

The story, as all who are familiar with the book will remember, relates of Tarzan as the son of an English nobleman who went to Africa on a secret mission for his government. A mutiny occurs, and he and his wife are marooned, and in the jungle a baby is born, the mother afterward dying. The story tells of the child being carried off by a mother ape, his growth in the jungle among the wild beasts, half ape and half human, till his twentieth year. Then a counter story taking place in England, but by far the most wonderful part of the spectacle is that picturing Tarzan's life in the wilds.

MODERN THEATRE

Throughout the entire week at the Modern Theatre there will be given the first Boston showing of Douglas Fairbanks, in his latest photoplay, "Mr. Fix-It," a story with the theme that happiness is nothing but a habit. The commanding photoplay will be Mae Marsh, in her latest photoplay, "Face in the Dark," a story of purposes and cross purposes in a combat between government officers and counterfeiters.

BEACON THEATRE

Again comes the apostle of happiness, and comedian of athletic prowess, Douglas Fairbanks, to spread his unctuous and athletic humors on the screen, in his latest photoplay, "Mr. Fix-It," which will be given its first Boston showings at the Beacon Theatre throughout the week. It is a story of a young man who seeks to take upon himself the sad burdens of others and wrestle with them for the benefit of their sorrows. This he does with happy success, though there are many adventures, odd and otherwise, encountered in the performance. It is said to be one of the jolliest of the comedian's photoplay offerings. On the same bill will be shown, also for the first times, Mae Marsh, in her new photoplay, "Face in the Dark."

FENWAY THEATRE

A most entertaining comedy, a pleasing story and one of the best characterizations of Mae Fitchford make "Amarilly of Clothesline Alley," the headline attraction at the Fenway this week, one of the very best features for some time.

On the same program Alice Joyce will be featured in "The Business of Life" a screen adaptation of one of Robert W. Chamber's "Best Sellers," in which Miss Joyce appears even more charming than usual in the role of a business woman, who while attending to the daily routine of business, finds herself a partner of a romance of the unusual sort which proves to be altogether pleasing in the end.

On the last three days of the week Ann Murdock will be featured in Charles Frohman's stage success "The Gilded Girl."

WOMAN AND LAW HEADS PARK BILL

"The Woman and the Law," which heads the bill at the Park Theatre the week of April 15, is a dramatization of the DeSaulles murder trial which was the sensation of the country not so long ago. In this picture the romantic story of Jack DeSaulles, the football player, who was slain by his wife, is told exactly as it happened in real life. The beautiful Chilian heiress who married DeSaulles, killed him for the sake of their child and was acquitted by an American jury is superbly portrayed, and the incidents of the trial are faithfully reproduced.

The other feature is Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne in "With Neatness and Dispatch," a six act Metro which shows how two young ladies win out in their love adventures despite the efforts of a maiden aunt who doesn't wish them to associate with men. The Pathe Weekly and the latest Mack Sennett comedy are included and the singers are the two Florentine soloists, Jean Fyfe and Irma Phillips. Sunday night, Zoe Rae, in "The Little Pirate," and "A Night in New Arabia."

LANCASTER THEATRE

At the Lancaster Theatre the first half of the week the bill will contain the William Fox production, "The Daughter of France," picturing Virginia Pearson as the central figure of a story of life on the present war. She is seen as a girl of a French village that is overrun by the German army, and there she plots against the invaders and gives aid to her own country's forces by acting as spy. As may be presumed, there is a plentitude of stirring adventure, and the end finds her the possessor of thanks from her government for the aid she has given. On the same bill will be offered "Revenge," picturing Edith Storey.

COLUMBIA THEATRE

An all-photoplay bill will be the policy at Lowe's Columbia Theatre, beginning with the coming week, the bills to be changed Mondays and Thursdays. For the first half of the week there will be shown Norma Talmadge in her latest photoplay, "The Night of Purchase," in which she is pictured as a society girl who gives herself in marriage to enjoy the riches of her husband. But where there had been no love, a love was generated, and later when her sincerity was challenged she was able to prove in a satisfying manner that she was a loving wife. On the same bill will be shown a startling photoplay of timely story, "German Curse in Russia." The bill for the last half will include William S. Hart in "The Tiger Man," and "Pay Me," picturing an all-star cast of players.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE

Pauline Frederick, well known as an actress and photo star, will appear this week at the Castle Square in a film version of Sardou's famous drama, "La Tosca." As a photoplay it follows faithfully the scenes and plot of the original, and in Miss Frederick audiences see a young actress who ably fills all the requirements of a striking, dramatic character.

For the remainder of the week the program will be equally interesting and varied. Mabel Normand will appear in "The Floor Below" and Taylor Holmes in "Hugging the Red Gap," with a Billy West comedy, "The Stranger," to fill out the bill with a number of other features.

BOSTON THEATRE

Irene Castle, famed as a dancer throughout the world, and already a famous motion picture star, will be will make its initial appearance in Boston at the Boston Theatre next week. Heading the vaudeville list on the same bill will be Master Gabriel, a diminutive star of international fame, in "The Hillcrest Mystery" Irene Castle has a vehicle suited to her wonderfully adaptable talent. The ending is exciting and surprising. Master Gabriel has long been known on the vaudeville stage for his success in juvenile roles and in his present comedy skit, "Little Kids," he is at his artistic best.

BLUE BIRD ON SCREEN AT ORPHEUM

The leader of the vaudeville bill at Lowe's Orpheum Theatre the first half of the week will be the master of ventriloquism, "the Great Howard," who will offer a complete play, with the title "Somewhere in France Is Daddy," which despite its serious impute in name is rated as a comedy. The surrounding bill includes Barnes and Boothe, in their comedy sketch, "Bundles of Nonsense"; O'Neil sisters, in a representative vaudeville offering, in which they sing, dance and wear startling costumes. On the screen there will be shown the latest News Pictorial, a comedy, and the screen version of Maurice Maeterlinck's "The Blue Bird." In all the realm of fanciful writing this play of allegory has earned for the Belgian Shakespeare the greatest meed of tribute. In the story the obvious intention of the author was to open the eyes of humanity to the beauties surrounding our every-day life, and to which we are blinded by familiarity. It should by all presents be a remarkable and lasting photoplay. The Thursday change of bill will bring Arturo Bernardi, the quick change artist.

SYMPHONY

It was damp and frosty out of doors yesterday, but there was nothing chilly about the ovation given Miss Guiomar Novaes at the Boston Symphony after she had played the great Chopin Concerto with stunning effect. The audience just clapped and hammered on the floor until the little Brazilian phenomenon had toddled out and bowed a dozen times.

Miss Novaes is only twenty-two years and looks younger. She is short, plump as a partridge and pretty. It looked as though she needed a high chair to reach the piano keyboard, but she managed. Oh, yes, she managed.

I am told that she is number seventeen of a family of nineteen. You wonder how parents down in Sao Paulo, where the cost of living is very high, were able to afford music lessons for her. But they did, and as a child she made such an impression that the Brazilian government sent her to the Paris Conservatory.

Chopin's second piano concerto has been played in Symphony Hall by De Pachmann, Paderewski and Josef Hofmann. Like all Chopin compositions, mere technique cannot satisfy; it requires emotional qualities, a myriad shades of expression, in fact inspiration, to play it effectively. These things the little lady from the coffee country possesses in abundance. Her performance was brilliant.

A symphony by Karl Ditters was practically a novelty, for it has been years since this contemporary of Mozart figured on a symphony program. His C Major Symphony has many points of resemblance to the lesser works of Mozart and Hardn, it is tuneful and cheerful if uninspired. A very attractive suite of dances written in the old style for string orchestra by Grieg and entitled, "From Holberg's Time," and the ever verdant symphonic poem of Smetana's "The Moldau" completed the program. Ernst Schmidt conducted satisfactorily.

OCEAN PIER

The beautiful ballroom on Ocean Pier at Revere Beach will open for the season on Thursday, April 18, with a Three O'Clock Hall and Cabaret. Last year the Ocean Pier was one of the most popular of the beach dancing resorts, and it is particularly popular with the young men in the service. Special features are offered for the holiday eve opening.

DAVID LLOYD GEORGE, Prime Minister of England, standing in the Cabinet room of the British Government in Downing Street, London, said to Mr. Griffith: "The idea back of your splendid story is a message to Civilization that its fight will not be in vain. Godspeed you in your great work and grant that you may accomplish your desires."

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH

IN NEW YORK CITY, at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre, on Thursday evening, April 4, the most notable audience that ever filled a theatre in Manhattan stood up and cheered for five minutes, the ovation exceeding in fervor and sound anything known in the history of the American theatre. Two thousand persons were literally swept from their seats by the enthusiasm and excitement to which they had been carried.

BASEBALL FUND DRIVE AROUSES INTEREST

Relatives Urged to Aid Soldiers at Camp Devens

Every person who has a relative at Camp Devens, and there are many thousands of them, is urged to make a contribution to the Boston AMERICAN Camp Devens Baseball Fund which will provide a baseball and athletic field at cantonments.

Send checks, money orders or other contributions to Lieutenant Robert C. Deming, treasurer, Camp Devens, Ayer.

and the sooner we get the required amount the sooner the boys "up there" will be having Saturday afternoon games that will take the shine off the big league events so far as the opinion of the 20,000 men at Ayer are concerned.

On the face of it the idea appeals to every red-blooded man; the chance to make a small contribution that will give the boys in the National army more opportunity for outdoor sport. And every man or woman who has a boy at the camp owes it, as one of the duties of the period, to go in for this fund.

Major General Harry Hodges, who really suggested the idea, thinks it is a world beater of a plan and he has assigned Lieutenant Robert C. Deming as official custodian of the fund to handle the money end of it.

TUOHEY COLLECTS FOR FUND.

A neat and welcome contribution to the fund was taken up at the weekly wrestling match at the Grand Opera House. Promoter George V. Tuohey began by making a little speech to the audience, explaining the fund, and he asked all those present who cared to contribute to approach the stage and throw their money up onto the boards.

As a result the sum of $58.45 was tossed onto the stage in a very few minutes. Mr. Tuohey says that he will make up enough to make it $65 or $70. He is a great booster for the fund and one of the first backers which were sent in when the fund was first announced came from this gentleman. More power to him!

HUNS' INSULTS TO GERARD SHOWN IN PHOTOPLAY

Crown Prince and Kaiser, as shown on screen in "My Four Years in Germany," by Ambassador Gerard.

The basest way in which Germany flouted our ambassador and the shortsighted way in which she despised America is well shown in a few incidents from Ambassador Gerard's photoplay, "My Four Years in Germany," shown this week at Tremont Temple.

On one occasion the duke of Mecklenburg-Schwerin halted Mr. Gerard on the street and said "The conduct of America in furnishing arms to our enemies is stamped deep in my heart." Gerard answers by referring to the treaties of the Hague, which permitted it. "We are nothing for treaties," shouted the duke. "I can well believe you!" retorted Gerard, and passed on.

The first note from President Wilson arrived on May 11, and was delivered to Von Jagow. "The Imperial government will not expect the United States to omit any word or act necessary to the sacred duty of maintaining the rights of the United States and its citizens and of safeguarding their free exercise and enjoyment." Bismarck scuffed at our first demands. On one occasion he worked himself into a passion. He cried, America dare not do anything. There are five hundred thousand German residents in America who will rise.

"And there are five hundred and one thousand lamp posts, and that is where they will find themselves by evening," was the quick reply of Gerard, who then left him.

Then occurs a dramatic incident. Zimmerman was dining with a pretty woman. Gerard being part of the conversation, and later the woman told him that Zimmerman scoffed at the tone of the notes, because he learned from the Austrian ambassador, Dumba, that they were intended for "home consumption."

This was so important that Gerard, fearing spies, sent the message to the President by courier. And the result was Wilson's note of July 11, in which he left no doubt that the United States intended fully to protect the lives of its citizens. Bryan promptly cabled Gerard, denying the Dumba interview, and Gerard notified the German government of its falsity.

TENOR RECITAL.

Thomas A. Quinn, tenor, a Cambridge young man will make his concert debut in Steinert Hall next Wednesday, April 17. Mr. Quinn is a pupil of Wallace Hunt of Steinert Hall who brought out Carolina White some years ago. Miss Mae A. Murray, violinist will assist and the accompanist will be Professor George Mettenheit, organist at St. Paul's Church, Cambridge. Mr. Quinn will sing in English, French and Italian.

ACTORS' FUND

The annual Actors' Fund Benefit will be held this year at the Colonial Theatre this afternoon (Saturday, April 20). As customary in the past, the entertainers will be from the current attractions in local theatres, in addition to which there will be several percentages of prominence who will come from New York especially for the occasion.

COMING EVENTS.

Anticipation runs high concerning "Pollyanna," read and beloved by thousands, which comes to the Tremont Theatre for a limited engagement, starting Monday, April 22, as a vivid, magnetic, human personality in the glad-hearted comedy portrayal by Klaw & Erlanger and George C. Tyler. The story of how Pollyanna played her glad game in a New England community is full of comedy and romance, aglow with optimism and the joy of living.

* * *

Henry W. Savage will present his latest musical success at the Colonial Theatre Monday night, April 22. "Toot Toot" is the title of the new offering, a musical adaptation of Rupert Hughes' "Excuse Me," originally produced by Mr. Savage, the new form being made by Edgar Allen Woolf, with lyrics by Berton Braley and music by Jerome Kern. The company is led by Louise Allen, Louise Groody, Zoe Barnett, Rose Kessner, Eddie Garvey, Paul Frawley and Barret Greenwood. The seats will go on sale next Tuesday.

* * *

One of the most popular farces ever written, "Charley's Aunt," which has been acted all over the world in many languages, will appear at the Hollis-Jerry Jewett Players at the Copley Theatre during the week of April 22. Leon Gordon will appear in the title role.

Maine's Governor Heartily in Favor of Baseball Fund

By GOVERNOR CARL E. MILLIKEN.

THE Boston AMERICAN seems to be taking just the right position in the efforts it is making to raise a baseball fund for the men at Camp Devens. Baseball is the one big American outdoor game that appeals to every person, no matter what his age.

I firmly believe that baseball has had much to do with making the American people as democratic as they are. By devoting some of their leisure time in camp to this great sport, the men will forget some of the rigors of military discipline that are constantly before them and will be able to preserve their individuality instead of losing it as might happen if they had "all work and no play."

BASEBALL EXTRA COMES OUT MONDAY

In baseball talk it's going to be "fast work"—lightning fast.

Meaning when the Boston AMERICAN'S BASEBALL EXTRA gets into the game next Monday.

All the sporting news of the day will be furnished the followers of sport on the day events happen, not the next day. No waiting for cold reports in morning papers.

It will be a journalistic "play" repeated every week-day. If it were to be described in language of the diamond it would sound something like this:

"EXTRA made a beautiful play, fielding NEWS to PUBLIC like a flash."

The Boston AMERICAN'S BASEBALL EXTRA will cover the sporting world completely. It will give extra service to sport followers. It will begin Monday, because that brings the opening of the Big League baseball season. The Red Sox meet the Athletics at Fenway Park, and the Yankees battle the Senators at Washington.

Results of the day in baseball, golf, tennis, yachting, racing and other sports will be found in the BASEBALL EXTRA, reported by such experts as the following:

Hugh S. Fullerton and "Nick" Flatley on baseball.

Corbett on boxing. Collyer on turf news.

James P. Murphy on boxing and cycling.

Jack Veteo and H. W. Lanigan on general sports, with J. B. Gilhooly, Sporting Editor of the AMERICAN, assembling the news in most readable form.

The BASEBALL EXTRA will cost two cents. The regular editions of the AMERICAN will remain at one cent as usual.

Notes Around the Store

Eventually, why not now?

* * *

We refer, of course, to buying your Liberty Bond.

* * *

Don't delay, buy today. The sooner we go "over the top" with the loan, the sooner the news will get over there and cheer the boys.

* * *

Education through play is the aim nowadays. One of our Toy Store features is the Wilkins Submarine R2, with directions for care and operation. A good way to teach the little boys what the big boys are fighting.

* * *

Red Cross and Surgical Dressings Club members will appreciate a light thin Apron for summer war work. A special purchase of fine lawn enables us to sell Red Cross Aprons of this material at one dollar.

* * *

Have you noticed that the neck is very much "dressed" this Spring? For the Jabot, so effective with a tailored suit, we have dainty Net Flounces, with embroidered and Venise edge, 17 inch width, at 79c a yard.

* * *

A new idea is to carry out the predominating bat color in the veil motif—for instance for a black hat with copen trim there is an sexagon mesh Black Veil, with copen scrolling and flower motif.

By HUGH S. FULLERTON.

Doping catchers is the hardest of all the work of figuring the strength of a ball club.

If we could know Schalk would catch every game for the White Sox; Wingo would catch 100, Clark forty and Allen ten games for the Reds, we could figure much more accurately.

But we know Schalk is prone to accidents. We also know, for instance, that McCarty is strong in the very departments in which Rariden is weak, and that Rariden is strong in McCarty's weak spots.

It is because of these things that we find such difference of opinion among fans, especially as to the strength of a team.

HOW HUGH DOES IT.

Since all dope is based upon the law of averages, we are compelled to figure how many games each catcher will work, and strike a club average based upon the proportion of games each catcher will work.

By this method we find Chicago leading the American League because of Schalk, in combination with Lynn, and Cincinnati in advance of the National League because of the strength of Wingo and Clarke, who not only are comparatively heavy hitters as well with pitchers, but strong enough at bat to help their teams.

It required a lot of figuring to keep the St. Louis Browns from showing the lead in catchers, for Severeid, Nunamaker and Hale form a strong trio—and the first two named can hit.

New York, it seems to me, has placed too many eggs in one basket and an accident that would seriously incapacitate Walter Schang would be a terrific blow to the pennant chances of Huggins' team, and right now Walters is a mighty good.

We find several clubs this season prepared to defy the lightning by starting with short handed catching staffs. However, there is one consolation that, in case of serious injuries, catchers of average ability can be had for the asking.

GOOD CATCHER BIG ASSET.

Of course, it is practically impossible to get the extraordinary catchers, who have become the rarest birds in the game, not even excepting good right-handed hitters. The team possessing a catcher of extraordinary ability has the big edge on the majority of others.

The Red Sox have Agnew, a corking find, and Wally Schang, who is needed elsewhere, but who probably will catch a number of games. Both fortifies them against accident. Athletics are well fixed with Cady, Meyer and Haley, the last named a nice hitting and very promising man.

Cleveland has wonderful defensive strength in the catching department but last year showed lamentable offensive weakness. I am free to figure that the hitting of O'Neill and Billings must get better, they hit well at ball and meet it solidly, and perhaps their low averages may be partly due to bad batting luck.

Neither, however, is liable to develop extra strength. Washington figures are in defensive and lamentably weak in offence, as Ainsmith has dropped back into the fourteen and a quarter hitting class.

SPENCER MADE FLASH.

As to forecasting almost anything might happen. The catching staff does not figure well—which is usual with the Detroit. Last year it seemed as if Hack Spencer would come back strong. He did for a long time, then faded away considerably.

The team is trying out a swarm of catchers, but Stanage must continue as the anchor catcher. If Detroit ever can develop a great catcher who can hit, the pitchers will improve to a certainty. They have been looking for one for years—and with only temporary successes.

STECHER COMING FOR GO WITH HUSSANE

Joe Stecher, wizard of the scissors hold, and Youssuff Hussane, burly Bulgarian, will furnish the fireworks at next Thursday night's wrestling show at the Grand Opera House.

If they repeat the great battle they put up in Madison Square Garden, New York, last month, Hub mat fans are set to enjoy their big treat of the season.

Hussane, while not a champion, has the almost uncanny knack of being able to force the stars to extend themselves, and this appears to be especially so against Stecher; in fact, it took the burly Westerner over an hour to score the necessary fall in their New York match.

Hussane proved the battling the most of the time and his blocking of the deadly hold, coupled with his efforts to land on one of his own bone-crushers, made the contest one of the most spectacular held in New York this Winter.

HARRY GREB SERIOUSLY SICK AND IN HOSPITAL

Pittsburg, April 13.—Harry Greb, middleweight boxer, is seriously ill at the Mercy Hospital. The fighter had a boil on his forehead lanced last Monday at Muncie, Ind. It is stated there is danger of blood poisoning and that Greb also has developed a dangerous case of pneumonia.

All of his fights have either been cancelled or postponed indefinitely. He was to meet George Chip at Bridgeport, Ct., next Monday night.

"JOHN L." AS I KNEW HIM

JAMES J. CORBETT — JOHN L. SULLIVAN

BY JAMES J. CORBETT.

THIS is the forty-seventh chapter of a series which James J. Corbett is writing on "John L. as I K new Him." It relates many heretofore unpublished incidents in the life of the great warrior. The next installment will appear Monday.

Some men retire from their chosen field of endeavor, and pass from within the rays of the spotlight for all time. But not so with John L. He loved the fight game as no other man loved it. Every big contest that was staged in America from the day that he became a warrior until the day of his death, found him at the ringside. He was an enthusiast over boxing and one of the keenest judges of fighting men in the country—except where an Irish fighter was concerned.

It ever was his belief that a good two-fisted Irishman was the peer of any other style of battler. And because of that favoritism John L. sometimes went a bit awry in his estimates of Irish fighters. Still, on the whole, John L. knew a real fighter when he saw one.

The "champion of champions" had no patience with the present day heavyweights. Jess Willard never appealed to him as a great fighter. John L. often classed Willard as a set-up.

Willard's lack of aggressiveness angered John L. and the fact that Jess wasn't knocking out foes in the first or second round of each fight mystified him.

"Why, if I'd have had that fellow's height and weight in my prime, I'd have taken on two fighters of the same time every night in the week—and whipped both of 'em."

RAPS PRESENT DAY BOXERS.

And John L. was about right!

Hip methods of the present day angered John L.

"They don't fight nowadays—all they do is hug each other," exclaimed John L. just a short time before his death. "I'd like to call for three minutes of fighting but about ninety-nine per cent of the so-called fighters would defraud the public that pays to see 'em battle.

"They fight only about thirty seconds in each round; the other two and a half minutes are spent in hugging each other.

"Clinching is unavoidable at times but the business of clinching a dozen times in each round—well, that's cowardice. Some of the boys are afraid to fight each other—afraid of getting hit. And yet they call themselves fighters.

"The fight game hasn't improved to a scientific way since 1892. Instead it seems to me to have gone back in that respect. The old timers fought all day or day and for a dozen years afterward—didn't have the benefit of teaching like the present day crop of fighters.

"They didn't have a corps of high-class trainers nor the benefit of fully equipped gymnasiums. Yet they were built for fighting the fighters of the present time in skill, cleverness and endurance powers.

WELL DESERVED TITLE.

In one of the chapters of this story I gave an affirmative answer to the question "Was John L. Sullivan ever the heavyweight champion of the world?"

In taking part in the clippings before me, I find that some years ago the same question was put to John L.—and he answered it in this way:

"I was certainly the heavyweight champion of the world. The title had passed from one man to another until it reached Paddy Ryan.

"He was the American champion without a doubt and in tracing down the world's championships one finds that it belonged to Joe Goss. Ryan whipped Goss—and that made Ryan the world's champion, didn't it? And I licked Ryan, didn't I?

"If that doesn't satisfy people that I was the champion of the world, look at my record. I schooled every man I fought in a championship bout between 1882 and 1891, with the exception of Charlie Mitchell, and I fought him to a draw.

"Peter Jackson was touted as some as the champion of Australia. Some people felt that I should have fought him to get my claim to the heavyweight championship of the world.

"Jackson was a negro and I drew the color line as regards a public bout. But I offered to fight him in private for a side bet of a million one, but Jackson refused."

John L. was square and fair; he never feared anything to which he really was not entitled. He was the heavyweight champion of the world.

Miske Defeats Old Gunner

Atlanta, Ga., April 13.—Billy Miske, St. Paul light-heavyweight, got the decision over Gunboat Smith in the ten-round bout for the benefit of the Camp Gordon athletic fund.

BRITT CANCELS; FLYNN MAY GO ON WITH MISKE

By J. P. MURPHY.

Frankie (Young) Britt, New Bedford battler, has been forced out of his bout booked with Jack Tendler of Philadelphia, which was to have opened the Armory A. A.'s Spring and Summer season, at the Arena next Tuesday night.

Britt is laid up with pleurisy; in fact, was a sick man when the Tendler match was made. But Frankie was anxious to get another crack at the Quaker City boxer that he had his heeling, hoping against hope he would be in shape in plenty of time to go into training. The excitement of the past few days, however, put a crushed on his expectations and consequently he has been forced to withdraw.

The directors of the Triple A have asked for offers in Harry Lewis of Pittsburgh, Rocky Kansas of Buffalo and Billy Miske, the light-heavyweight champion of the world.

If unable to secure Pirelo or Kansas to box Tendler, they will match Miske with the best available man of his weight, probably Dan (Porky) Flynn, West End's renowned battler of other days.

Flynn is in excellent shape, he admits. He has just finished an extensive course of training for an eight-round mill with Jack Dempsey, Boston sensation, which was booked for St. Louis. Much to Porky's sorrow, however, the bout was called off by order of the Missouri City police chief, and he is now anxious to show at one of the local clubs.

Rivers Stops Demaris in C. A. C. Feature; Powers is Winner Over Young Goula

Joe Rivers of Gloucester, Johnny Downes of South Boston; Dave Powers, Malden sorrel top, and Charley De Angelo of Revere, were returned winners in the four wrestling mills at the weekly entertainment of the Commercial A. C. last night.

Rivers scored a somewhat unusual knockout in the final setto, putting away Joe Demaris of Franklin, with a right hand kidney punch in the eighth round. Demaris, weak and exhausted from a long siege of punishment, fell flat on his face and remained there while Referee Conley tolled off the fatal ten.

Young Goula, Woonsocket mauler, met his match in Powers in a rugged ten-round semi-final.

Goula's rushing tactics had the Maldenite at sea in the early rounds, but Dave finally solved his foe's attack and was beating him badly when the final gong sounded.

The first of the three ten-rounders also proved a thriller, Downes earning a well deserved award over Joe Woods of Manchester, N. H. both men kissed the mat once, Downes in the seventh and Woods in the eighth.

C. A. C. BOOKS CLASSY CARD FOR NEXT SHOW

Next Friday night's show at the Commercial A. C. assumes the proportions and bids fair to draw a good sized gathering. It will consist of four ten-round bouts, as follows:

Teddy Murphy, West End, vs. Joe Dyson, New Bedford; Johnny Downes, South Boston, vs. Billy Woods, Manchester, N. H.; Henry Le Boeuf, New Bedford, vs. Larry Regan, South Boston; and Young Goula, Woonsocket, vs. Vic Dave Powers, Malden.

COLLYER'S SELECTIONS AT BOWIE.

7—Bazer, Edith Bannman, Petelus.
Most probable winner—IVA KAY.

ALL A MISTAKE; KING ALEX IS NOT IN DRAFT

St. Paul, Neb., April 12.—Grover Cleveland Alexander, crack pitcher of the Chicago Nationals, has not been drafted, according to an announcement made by K. D. Habensky, clerk of the exemption board here.

The statement was made in answer to queries coming from what by circumstantial report is that Alexander had been called for service.

Alexander's case is still pending. He added that there was "a possibility the noted pitcher may be sent to Camp Funston to train for Camp Funston, April 28."

EAGLE AND WOODWARD LOST IN BOWIE FILLY

Bowie, Md., April 13.—A fire that broke out in the early morning destroyed the stables of Eagle and Woodbine. Some of the best horses at the track, including Eagle, Woodward, Musselbead Caiter, George W. Avery, Fellowship, Jem Doolaur and Woodbine, were housed there. Twenty-seven horses in all were lost.

Eagle was winner of the Liberty Bond purse for the Pimlico stable.

The race for Canadian-bred horses remains for the Bowie Handicap, which just got up in time to beat fled flight.

BROWNS MAKE IT TWO STRAIGHT OVER CARDS

St. Louis, April 13.—Idle since last Sunday, the Cardinals and Browns put on the second game of their series, the Browns winning, 8 to 4. The series closes tomorrow, and the National Leaguers must win two straight to even it up. Score by innings:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Browns | 0 1 0 0 0 1 6 2 0 | 10 | 0 |
| Cardinals | 0 0 1 0 0 0 3 0 0 | 4 | 2 |

TERRY BROOKS KAYOS 'ANDSOME 'ARRY CONDON

Taunton, April 13.—Terry Brooks, Hoosick Falls, N. Y., knocked out Harry Condon of Brooklyn in the fourth round of their scheduled ten-round go. Brooks was entirely too robust for Condon, who was in trouble throughout.

NAVAL RESERVES CALL PFEFFER OF DODGERS

New York, April 13.—Pitcher Ed Pfeffer of the Brooklyn Dodgers will be called by the draft board this season. He was today ordered to report to the United States naval auxiliary reserve at Chicago.

Cochrane Wins from Schaefer

New York, April 13.—Walter Cochrane, 1200, Young Jake Schaefer, 1146. That's the final score of their 18.2 balkline match.

GOSSIP OF GLOVELAND

By J. P. MURPHY.

A HUGE poster comes from Milwaukee, getting out a mighty big boost for the setto between Ted (Kid) Lewis and Joe Eagan, which is billed for that city on Thursday night. The date was to make 150 rounds of it, but it has been cut down to 15.

* * *

ACCOMPANYING THE poster is a note from Eagan in which he threatens to "put the middleweight champion of the world to sleep." Joe has designs on the welterweight championship, and if he can defeat Lewis in battle, at 142 pounds ringside, he will be successful against the English star.

* * *

CLYDE HAWKINS, husky colored veteran from Worcester, Massachusetts, is anxious to try conclusions with Battling Levinsky or Dan (Porky) Flynn at one of the local clubs.

* * *

SOLDIER ROSKO, formerly of the Italian army, and Frankie Mahoney, Irish lad, finally did not get enough fighting during the bout at the Arena this week to suit them, so now speaking for battles with any lightweight in the country. They can be reached through his manager, Soldier Doyle, Seventh Ward, Everett.

* * *

JACKIE WILLIAMS has been appointed matchmaker of the Trinity A. A. of Cambridge. He aims to match Sailor Sarro and Tommy Regan, both of East Boston, in the main bout of the club's next show.

* * *

TERRY BROOKS, ring of the newcomers, was signed to meet Lew Bodler, in Philadelphia, April 20. Naturally Terry does not expect to outstep his classy opponent, but he is hopeful he will slip over his "Mary Ann" if he does, he's made.

RED SOX DRILL IN HARVARD'S CAGE TODAY

Barrow Planned Giving Entire Squad Workout — Picks Swat Order for Monday

By HENRY L. DAILY.

The Red Sox, back home, are in fighting trim and ready for Monday's championship opening with Connie Mack's Athletics at Fenway Park.

With the playing field at Fenway Park a veritable quagmire, ankle deep in slush and mud, Manager Barrow arranged to give his squad a workout in the Harvard cage. Soldiers' Field, this afternoon.

Although Barrow is not entering the pennant race in an overjoyed mood, the outlook of his team for the coming season

HOST OF NEW FACES.

He has worked hard to prepare his machine. All through the Hoosp there are strange faces and it will certainly take some little time for the boys to settle down to a routine of inning playing.

The team will play 149 games, starting May 8, as previously announced.

President J. J. McCaffery of the Toronto Club has announced that he has secured Jim Howley, former manager of the Montreal club, to pilot his team. Howley went south with the Boston Red Sox this Spring, drilling the ball players for Ed Barrow.

J. J. Jannin, former Red Sox pitcher, and Jack White, Cambridge boy, will draw a old southpaw, to manage his Toronto club.

GOSSIP OF GLOVELAND

By J. P. MURPHY.

A HUGE poster comes from Milwaukee, getting out a mighty big boost for the setto between Ted (Kid) Lewis and Joe Eagan, which is billed for that city on Thursday night. The date was to make 150 rounds of it, but it has been cut down to 15.

* * *

ACCOMPANYING THE poster is a note from Eagan in which he threatens to "put the middleweight champion of the world to sleep." Joe has designs on the welterweight championship, and if he can defeat Lewis in battle, at 142 pounds ringside, he will be successful against the English star.

STIRRING NOVEL MAY BE A PROPHECY

Gisela Divided Between Duty to Her Women in Revolution and Flying to Spain With Franz

Principal Characters.

HELOISE VON ERKEL and MIMI BRANDT, her close friends.

MRS. ANN PRENTISS and MRS. TOLBY (Kate Prentiss), whom Gisela met in America and who now, in Germany, opened the eyes of the girls to German perfidy.

FRAU VON ERKEL, mother of the Von Erkel girls.

GEORG ZOTTMYER, selected suitor of Gisela's.

FREIHERR FRANZ VON NETTELBECK, whom Gisela loved but killed for fear he would ruin her plans.

By Gertrude Atherton

SHE was utterly in his power if he awakened and chose to assert it. He had mastered her, conquered her, routed her career and her peace, and she had gloried in her submission. Figured to be still. A commonplace woman would have been satisfied, exhilarated, felt free for the moment, turned with relief to the dry convention of the daily adventure, rather resenting, if she had a pretty will, the supreme surrender to the race in an unguarded hour.

Gisela was cast in the heroic mold. She came down from the old race of goddesses of her own Nibelungenlied, whose passions might consume them but had nothing in common with the ebb and flow of mortals. But great brains are fed by stormy souls, and in the souls of women there is an element of weakness, unknown, save in a few notable instances, to great men in the crises of their destiny; for women are the slaves of the race, and nature when permitting them the abnormality of genius takes her revenge.

If Franz awakened . . . There was little time for thought. Gisela must plan quickly. If she left the house at once he might awaken immediately and after searching the apartment, follow her; there was the dire possibility that he would learn too much before the terrific drama of the revolution opened, and manage to thwart their plans.

He was a man of quick brain and ruthless will; no consideration for her would stop him, although he would save her from the consequences of her act, no doubt of that. Save her for himself.

Mimi Brandt and Heloise and Marie von Erkel were asleep in rooms at the end of the hall. She had a mad idea of binding him hand and foot and locking him in her bedroom . . . Either he would hate her for the humiliation he—Franz von Nettelbeck, glorious on the field of honor, a bound prisoner in a woman's bedroom, while his class was blown to atoms, and his caste was roaring its impotent fury to a napping God!

An Impossible Course

Oh, an insufferable affront to a man of his order who had ever the dearest woman as the favored pensioner on his bounty . . . or she would be consumed with remorse, melt . . . It was positive that she must stun him—not leave him to starve . . . not could she keep him bound . . . and soon more, she would be his slave . . . could she hold out even for a day!

The first throw of a revolution is either won or lost in five. There is always the danger of a counter-revolution.

Unremitting vigilance, wary, unscrupulous management are the part of its leaders for months, possibly years, to come. All revolutions are dependent for ultimate success upon one pre-eminent figure.

Franz stirred under the unconscious flutter of her gaze and changed his position, lying on his back. She hastily averted her eyes. Her hands clenched and spread. Keep tomorrow if this man found her . . . one soft moment . . . when she needed all her energy, her fire, her powers of concentration, of impersonalization, for the millions of tortured women who would follow her straight out to meet any division that Emperor might detach in the vain hope of subduing an army far outnumbering all that he had left of men.

A Crucial Moment

Nothing but a miracle could halt the initial stage of the revolution; the wireless plants were all operated by women to her service, and no telephone message had advised her of danger. No matter what her defection at this moment the revolution would begin at dawn, but although Germany happily lacked the disintegrating forces of Russia, comfortable as she had been for two generations, and proud in her discipline, that very discipline would dissolve its new backbone without the stimulating force of her own inexorable will. And if she deserted them! . . .

It was a woman's revolution. A necessary number of men Socialists had been admitted to the secret and were to strike the second blow. But the women must strike the first, and according to programme. Not only were the men under surveillance, but where women would be pardoned in case of a failure they would be shot.

And most of them had more brain than brawn, were past the fighting age; the girls and women of middle years, were a magnificent army which would make the graybeards appear absurd in the open.

These women worshipped her, believed her to be a super-being created to save them and their children; but if she betrayed them, prayed herself the merest woman of them all, a childless woman at that—the very bones would melt out of them, they would prostrate themselves in the ashes of their final despair.

Spain! Franz! For a moment her imagination rioted.

She smiled ironically. Happiness! Four-walled happiness! Hardly for her, even without the sight of murdered thousands soaking her doorstep. Love, for women like her . . . even eternal love . . . must be episodical. Life forces the duties of leadership on such women whether they resent them or not. They must take their love where they find it as great men do, subordinated to their chosen careers and the tremendous duties and responsibilities that are the fruit of all achieved ambition.

Puss in Boots Jr.

By David Cory

NOW, in the story before this, I left off just as Puss Junior and the handsome prince went to the back door of the house where the wicked witch lived. But you mustn't forget that she had just flown on her old broomstick, so we needn't be afraid of her. But, oh, dear me! sitting on the doorstep was her old black cat. And wasn't she a dreadful-looking thing . . .

Well, I guess she was. Her eyes were as green as grass, and right in the middle of each was a little red spot that looked like fire. Her tail was as big as a feather boa, and the hair stood up as straight as the quills on a porcupine when he's angry through and through and maybe some more.

But when she saw Puss, who wasn't a bit afraid, she looked all around for something to fly away on. And before you could say "Winkum Blinkum" she had turned into an old dustpan and away she went through the sky after her wicked old mistress, but what the cat of this dreadful black cat I'll never tell you, for I don't know except that a little bird told me so. The handsome prince began to laugh. "Here is my reward, little Puss Junior, come quick, see." So in they got and away went the four prancing horses, and if they don't run away and break their necks I'll tell you the next time—if a black cross doesn't fly in front of them—what happened when they reached the castle, or maybe sooner, for things happen sometimes before we are ready for them.

Potatoes to the Fore

A FEW HINTS ABOUT PLANTING THEM

(The National War Garden Commission, which sends out the following article, is urging all Americans to plant war gardens to help the country win the great war.)

THE one staple garden crop above all others needed this year is Irish potatoes, says the National War Garden Commission of Washington.

Potatoes may, to a large extent, be substituted for grains, and may be served in so many appetizing ways that they should be grown in generous amounts this year, says the bulletin. They may be planted as soon in the Spring as the ground can be put into condition. Prepare the ground as deeply as possible without turning up much poor subsoil and make rows three inches deep, about thirty inches apart.

Use well-rotted manure or fertilizer, but do not use coarse manure. Have the hills from fourteen to eighteen inches apart, depending upon the richness of the ground. Cover the seed piece about four inches deep. This makes a little ridge over the seed, but it disappears with cultivation.

It will pay to treat the seed potatoes for scab even though they seem to be perfectly clean and healthy. Put one ounce of formalin in two gallons of water and soak the potatoes in it for one and a half hours. Then spread them out to dry and do not cut them until planting time.

Potatoes for the Spring crop should be sprouted before planting. To do this, spread them out in a warm place in full light. Short, stout sprouts will start. These must be handled carefully, as not to break them off in planting.

The best size of seed to plant is about 1½ ounces, either for whole small potatoes or for cut pieces. Cut the larger potatoes so as to have two or more eyes in each piece, unless the eyes are far apart and a two-eye piece would be too large; in that case cut to one-eye pieces. When the cut pieces have only one eye they may be planted a little closer together than if they have two or more eyes. Plant as soon as cut.

Psychology of Stage Fright

IT'S A SURVIVAL OF PRIMITIVE EMOTION

By Brice Belden, M. D.

STAGE emotions as fear and anger affect the body very greatly because of their stimulating effect upon what are known as the ductless glands. The thyroid gland in the neck, and the adrenal glands over the kidneys are the most important ones concerned. Under emotional stimulus they pour into the circulation substances which influence the behavior of the muscles and blood vessels in certain very definite ways.

In the presence of danger or in circumstances which arouse anger or rage the blood pressure and the distribution of the blood are affected by reason of the greatly increased production of adrenalin, which is manufactured by the adrenal glands. Adrenalin lessens the calibre of certain vessels by reason of its action upon what is known as the vasomotor system of nerves, the consequences being a quickening of the circulation, a rise in pressure and a checking of the activities of the digestive organs. At the same time the thyroid secretion plays a part in energizing the body's functions.

In a word our emotions put into operation certain bodily mechanisms which are exceedingly useful in preparing us for movements of defence or fighting. We are prepared in this manner for either flight or combat, according as the higher centres determine.

No matter how much of the veneer of civilization man acquires, the call of the wild is still potent, and we roughly estimate the degree of manhood in an individual by the manner in which he seeks or reacts to danger. The red badge of courage must in some manner be displayed.

Until he gets into action, in response to his ductless glands, he may suffer from stage fright. Mere anticipation of the "ordeal" may cause terror. Speech and gestures relieve the situation, and repetition of the experience finally finds him master of himself.

Well, sed Ma, a Bolshyveeky is a politishun in Russia wich has formed a new party better than sum of the old parties & with lots of followers, like the Democrats of our land, Ma sed. That is all you need to tell the teecher tomorrow, sed Ma.

No, sed Pa, that isent enuff to tell. You must tell, Bobbie, sed Pa, sum of the habits & manners of these here politishuns. They are ruff, heeded men, sed Pa, as wrikers got thare first start in Rusha & have been waving thare ever since, sed Pa. Thare aint many barbers in Rusha, sed Pa, & you can travel all day thru Siberia, Pa sed, & never run across a hair dresser or a manikure girl.

I guess that will be about enuff informashun about these quaint persons, sed Ma. If Bobbie rites down all you tell him he will git skolded by his teacher, sed Ma.

Love and Family Life

THEY ARE WORTH WORKING FOR

Beatrice Fairfax Says the Self-Supporting Mother Is Happier Than the Self-Supporting Spinster

By Beatrice Fairfax.

THE following letter came to me the other day, and as it implies a slight misconception in regard to some of the things I have written about women continuing to work after marriage, I shall answer it at length.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

You have written so much lately about women "holding their jobs" after marriage, that I should like to ask you a few questions.

Don't you think it is a better arrangement when the woman stays home and keeps house and cares for the children, when there are no longer instead of going out and helping to earn the family living?

That's the way it used to be in my home, and I hope it's going to be like that with me some day, but I must say there are no such prospects at present. I am employed in a government office, and I'm not "crazy" about it. Certainly. I should not like to continue there if I do marry. I am now twenty-eight, and there seems nothing ahead for me but work. Yours sincerely,

ROSEMARY.

To begin, Rosemary, I do think it a better arrangement when the woman stays home and keeps house, the way your mother and father did, and twen man goes out and earns the family living. But that happy state of affairs is getting to be more and more difficult for people of moderate incomes, owing to the high cost of living.

Not very long ago, with strict economy, a hundred dollars a month would suffice for a small family. That was about the average salary for a government employe, and, once on a time, it could be stretched and squeezed into covering the family budget, but now it leaves in its wake a trail of debts and anxieties, when directed toward that end.

I am speaking, of course, of the cost of living in big cities where everything must be bought and paid for, but life on a farm, where foodstuffs may be raised.

But of the two alternatives—a lonely and sterile old age, or home life where husband and wife both work—the latter seems to me infinitely preferable. With youth, health, and love any miracle is possible, and you must not leave out of the question the tremendous incentive to doing one's best that home and children bring. They are the great spur that has made the world take all the high hurdles.

Legislators all over the world are awakening to these new economic conditions. Even the most reactionary to them, who are still mediaeval in regard to woman suffrage, will vote for "mother's pensions" and "maternity insurance," and similar remedial legislation designed to meet the new conditions that have become well-nigh intolerable for people in modest circumstances.

What Would Grandma Say?

If a woman must work in an office eight hours a day through youth and middle age, isn't it better for her to come home at night to a home and—the incalculable blessing of children, perhaps—than to a cheerless room and solitude?

The care of young children during the absence of the mother is not frought with insuperable difficulties. It would require of course, an intelligent system of adjustment such as has been successfully tried out by several professional women of my acquaintance.

Every one must settle this problem according to her means and situation. It would require, for instance, no great strain of the imagination to leave a group of such babies in charge of one or more trained nurses who would have specialized in regard to child welfare. Roof gardens on apartment houses are not difficult or expensive—they might easily be converted into baby gardens or Montessori schools.

Could anything have seemed wilder or more radical to our grandmothers, with their inexorable system of keeping house, than the communal kitchens of the modern flat, the public laundry, the bakery, the vacuum cleaner? Why, then should not a baby house with a modern nursery in charge of competent nurses seem to cataclysmic? Children reared in such an environment would certainly have a better chance of living and acquiring the habits of a good constitution than the children reared by well-to-do, but unthinking, mothers, who seem well, but sin through ignorance.

ARMY AND NAVY AMERICAN

DEMOCRACY — BOSTON, SATURDAY, APRIL 13, 1918 — LIBERTY

RECEIVING SHIP TO PUT 10 IN RELAY RACE

By PAUL F. WHELTON.

Aboard the Receiving Ship at Boston, April 13.—A marathon relay team of ten men will represent the Receiving Ship in the Patriots' Day event from Ashland to Boston. Lieutenant D. W. Nelson, at present executive officer of the ship, has received authorization to enter such a team.

Heretofore the annual B. A. A. marathon on Patriots' Day has been a twenty-five-mile grind for each man. This year, however, because of the armament overseas with Bad Bill of the Potsdam Pirates, and the military state of affairs in general, the affair has been made a "service relay marathon," with teams from the various army and navy camps and training stations competing.

Next year, however, following the exile of the Kaiser and the restoration of normal pursuits to a sane, peaceful world, the ancient grind undoubtedly will be restored.

Assistant Athletic Director [illegible] Mooney is coaching the squad from which he will pick the 10 men to represent the receiving ship in the relay. Abe Arensberg is assisting him. The men are working indoors at present but will take to the road Monday, weather permitting.

Trainer Mooney says that such a short space of training will be sufficient to whip his men into shape, as the daily life of a bluejacket is on a par with that of an athlete.

Editorial

It is to be regretted that the candidates at the Third Officers' Training School at Camp Devens are not scheduled to appear in the Patriots' Day parade in Boston April 19.

These candidates are probably the best trained soldiers in the country today outside of the boys at West Point. They are superior to the graduating classes of either of the Plattsburg camps, as their instructors profited by the mistakes made at those camps.

They represent the best soldier material in New England's first draft army. Boston was denied an opportunity to see the men in either of the Plattsburg camps, and Patriots' Day will be the last time the members of the third training school will be available for parade as a unit.

They would look well with "Boston's Own."

ROOKIES' PARADE CUT OUT BY STORM

By WILLIAM FLYNN.

Camp Devens, April 13.—The blizzard which severed the cantonment with a deep mantle of snow today caused an indefinite postponement of the scheduled parade of the "rookies" in the Depot Brigade, who were to have celebrated their release from two weeks of quarantine by passing in review before Major-General Harry F. Hodges and several other officials of the 76th Division.

The 3,000 negroes from the South who were to have led the parade looked forward to their first formal appearance as soldiers in the National Army with joy, and the announcement that the parade was called off caused gloom.

The snow, however, was a big attraction to the negroes. It is the first that most of them have ever seen, and today they were out of their barracks feeling and tasting of it. Several impromptu snowball fights were staged.

Every ailment these colored draftees have is characterized as "misery." They have "misery" in the head, "misery" in the back, "misery" all over.

U. S. TIRE CO. TO OPEN PLANT IN PROVIDENCE

By C. F. DONNOCKER.

The unprecedented demand for solid truck tires, caused by the war, and the more general use of commercial vehicles made necessary by unusual demands on the railroads which they could not fulfil, and the enormous increase in manufacturing, made it necessary for the United States Rubber Company to purchase the large manufacturing plant of the American Locomotive Company at Providence, R. I. The output of the company has been doubled in the past two years and greater space was needed.

The property immediately adjoins the Revere plant of the United States Rubber Company, where the company has concentrated its solid tire activities, and the new plant will be part of the Revere unit, which thus becomes a dominant factor in the country for the manufacture of solid truck tires. The enlarged organization of the unit will remain under the direction of E. W. Waite, the factory manager of the Revere plant.

In addition to manufacturing solid truck tires, the factory will give considerable space to the development of its business in pneumatic cord tires for commercial vehicles.

"The enforced use of auto trucks in order to meet the transportation problems brought on us by the war," according to a recent statement by J. N. Gunn, president of the United States Tire Company, "will give the business men such a taste of the satisfactory results to be obtained by the use of these trucks that I see nothing but a tremendous business in prospect for our truck tire manufacturing departments."

The American Locomotive plant, with a floor space of 246,848 square feet, is on a tract of ten acres with a river frontage and with a siding connection with the main line of the New Haven road.

Colonel Samuel P. Colt, president of the United States Rubber Company, lives in Rhode Island and is receiving many congratulations for having landed for Rhode Island a business enterprise which, when in full operation will add at least 3,000 employes to the payrolls of the Revere plant.

FINANCES OF SWIFTS INTERESTS WASHINGTON

Washington, April 13.—Food administration officials are interested in the report that Swift & Co., Chicago packers, were about to increase their capital stock from $100,000,000 to $150,000,000. Those charged with keeping a close watch on the packing houses in an effort to provide a universal system of accounting, so that the actual profits of the big houses and their subsidiaries might be ascertained, were especially interested.

Big Over-Subscription to the Liberty Loan Important

Show German People That the People of the United States Are Behind the War With Utmost Resources

The German government has issued to its people the following appeal:

President Wilson threatens us with force to the utmost without stint or limit. We believe he means it. Therefore hasten ye all and subscribe to the loan.

The German government thus replies to the President by appealing to the German people to subscribe to their government bonds. Let every American answer by over-subscribing to our bonds.

We Americans cannot over-estimate the importance of prompt, hearty and overwhelming over-subscription of this bond issue.

We must always keep in mind the fact that the German people are intelligent. They understand the resources of this country in men and wealth. So well do they understand it that their government never at any moment since our declaration of war undertook to minimize the effect in the war of our ultimate power, if we chose with all our might and main to exert it. But the German government did undertake to reassure the German people, upon our declaration of war against Germany, first, that the American people were not behind the war and would not exert themselves to put forth their utmost power; and, second, that, even if they did, the U-boats would be able to prevent the marshaling of that power on the battlefront in Europe.

Now the German people have been entirely disillusioned about the capacity of the submarine to win this war. Lord Reading, the distinguished British representative in America, in a recent speech told the world that the ships of the allies had since the German ruthless submarine campaign started transported more than 13,000,000 people, and that of that enormous number only 3,500 had been lost through attacks of submarines. Already we have transported hundreds of thousands of men to the European front without loss, and the Canadians have transported even more without loss. Even the German military writers are beginning to confess the disappointment of their expectations from the submarines.

The German people now realize that their submarines will not be able to prevent America from marshaling her powers against them on the western front. Therefore, their remaining hope is that the other assurance of the German government may be true, that the American people are not behind the war, and will not make their greatest effort to put forth all their power.

The subscription to the Liberty Loan will be the best means of disillusionizing the German people of that idea and of dispelling that last hope. There is not an intelligent German in the whole German Empire, and the average of education in Germany is greater than the average of education in any country in the world, including our own, who does not understand perfectly that if the full power of America is thrown into the balance against Germany she is utterly, hopelessly doomed.

When the partisan Republican politicians started their congressional campaign with an organized whining that America's preparation had been a failure after a year of war, the Hearst newspapers denounced this kind of campaign both as untrue and as treasonable in its partisan purpose and in its inevitable effect upon the German morale. The German people know our unequalled resources and they also know our energy for organizing, our inventive genius, and our general resourcefulness, as well as our resources in men and material. They will understand that we have not failed in preparation, unless we are indifferent to preparation. The way to show the German people that we are not indifferent to preparation is to show them by our subscription to this loan that we are not indifferent to the war, for if we are not indifferent to the war, we will not be indifferent to preparation; and if we are not indifferent to preparation, the German people will know that we will not be indifferently prepared.

Thus in the great struggle between the opposing peoples, which is even a more fundamental struggle than the struggle of the armed forces, the question of subscribing to our Liberty Bonds is of the utmost importance.

Clerks on the Farms

The following letter contains a very interesting suggestion which the AMERICAN most heartily endorses:

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

During this critical time, when it is the duty of every American to do their bit and render what assistance they can in winning the war, the following suggestion comes to our mind, whereby those who work in offices can render a patriotic duty to the government by devoting the time that they have for their Summer vacations in assisting the farmers. This would not only relieve the young men on farms for war duty, but would bring the office workers out into the open air and would not be a sacrifice on their part, but a pleasure.

We would like to have you write an editorial on this topic, as we believe there are many men who, if it was brought to their attention, would gladly give their services for a few weeks in the Summer time in such a worthy cause.

SHERMAN SERVICE INC. (Mass.)
F. L. TAYLOR,
Superintendent.

The practice of putting boys on farms and asking the farmers to pay them a stipulated sum has not worked out very well, we are informed, because it is difficult to superintend the boys' work and because they are necessarily, from their inexperience, very inefficient. But if those, including the boys from school, who work indoors and do not get enough exercise to give them the health they need would spend their vacation on some farm this Summer without pay, instead of hanging around the watering and mountain resorts, dancing and flirting, they could do their bit for their country and come back very much stronger and more healthy and with more in their pockets than they usually do from their vacation.

MRS. WILSON WOODROW'S ARTICLE

Organized Charity, It Seems, Must First Telegraph to a Starving Man's References in a Most Distant City Before It Is Permissible to Feed a Hungry Man or Help Him.

By Mrs. Wilson Woodrow

WHAT would you do if you found yourself "broke" in a strange city, without friends or acquaintances?

That was the interesting question a man submitted to me the other day. "Submitted," though, is hardly the word; he had just met me as I was strolling up Fifth avenue, and as he turned and walked along beside me he shot out the question with a vindictive earnestness that showed his feelings had been aroused to the boiling point.

"I don't mean merely 'strapped' or 'financially embarrassed,' he went on, "but 'flat broke,' penniless, hungry, with no place to rest your head."

I reflected a moment. "Why, if such a thing should happen to me," rapping the wood of my umbrella-handle to avert the evil possibility, "I should try to get something to do—I wouldn't care what."

Tried and Failed

"But suppose you had tried and failed? Suppose you were faint with hunger and ready to drop with fatigue?"

"Oh, then I suppose I would apply to one of the public charities," I said.

"Yes; and a sweet chance you'd run of getting any relief," he exploded wrathfully. Then he launched, as I had anticipated, into the story which explained his perturbed spirits.

He had called the day before, it seemed, at a private school which is attended by his little daughter, and there had found in conversation with the principal, a man of good address, although looking a little seedy, who was trying to obtain a position—in an extra or substitute capacity if nothing better offered.

The principal had nothing for him, but the applicant still lingered and so persistently urged his claims that she finally turned to my friend, and explaining that the man was a teacher from the far West who had failed, through no fault of his own, to establish an expected New York connection, asked her if he knew of any opening.

"Not necessarily at teaching," said the Westerner, quickly stepping forward as if to forestall the almost certain demurrer. "I am willing to do anything—anything at all, no matter how small the pay, until I have a chance to look around."

The New Yorker is naturally suspicious—he has been so often stung—but there was something in this man's manner that aroused my friend's sympathy, a hint of desperation. Looking closer he saw in the stranger's face the signs of physical suffering. He scribbled a line on a card to a friend who is in charge of a large business establishment, asking that the man be given employment suitable to his qualifications; then he drew the other aside and pressed a bill into his hand.

But the Westerner reddened and drew back. "Oh, no, thank you," he protested. "I can't take money. I merely want work, and you have already given me a chance at that."

"Don't be a fool," said my friend. "You're hungry, and you can't strike for a job properly on an empty stomach. If the case were reversed, I'd take that dollar only too quickly."

In the end the teacher was persuaded, and hurried away with the bill and my friend's card. The next day the latter was surprised to receive a visit from the Westerner, who jubilantly announced that the card had secured him a position running a freight elevator, and that having been paid a day's wages, he had come to return the dollar.

Then the man told something of his experiences. He had come to New York to accept a place in a school, but on the way he was taken ill with pneumonia and had to go to a hospital on his arrival. When he came out the vacancy he was after had been filled, and his money was about all gone. He knew no one in New York, and he hesitated until the last moment to write back home for aid.

When he did he had to face the fact that ten days must intervene before he could get an answer. Feverishly he sought for work. The Municipal Employment Bureau sent him to a munitions factory in Hoboken, but the doctor there refused to permit him to work on account of his weak lungs. He was compelled to pawn his every possession, even down to his overcoat, and walked miles daily to save carfare, but still he could get no work.

"Two days before I met you," he said to my friend, "I spent my last ten cents for a sandwich and a glass of milk. That dollar of yours looked bigger to me than all of Rockefeller's millions."

"But if you were hungry," demanded the other, "why did you not go to one of the public charities?"

"I did," he smiled grimly. "They gave me a blank to fill out as long as the moral law, and asked for personal references. I wrote down the name of a bank president, the mayor and several other prominent citizens of my home town. Then they told me to come back the next morning. I reaped; twenty-four hours seemed a long wait to me. 'Can't you give me some little job in the meantime?' I pleaded. 'Something, even if it earns me only ten or fifteen cents?' But they said no; they must first telegraph to my references.

"When I heard that I reached out and grabbed the blank I had filled out and tore it in two. I would rather starve than let those men whose names I had given know that I was reduced to such straits."

An Old Adage

"And that is organization charity for you," concluded my friend disgustedly. "Ask for bread and they will give you a stone—neatly tied up in red tape. Not another dollar of mine do they ever get."

I do not give this little story for the purpose of arraigning public or organized charities. If I were to do that I should be overwhelmed with a mass of figures and statistics which would leave me not a leg to stand on. Red tape is born of figures and statistics, and by them can always prove and justify its existence.

I only say that if a case of this kind could occur—even if it is an individual and exceptional case—there is something wrong somewhere with the charities.

"Do It Now"

By GEORGE A. TURNER

If with pleasure you are viewing any work a man is doing,
If you like him or you love him, tell him now;
Don't withhold your approbation 'till the parson makes oration
As he lies with snowy lilies o'er his brow;
For no matter how you shout it, he won't really care about it;
He won't know how many teardrops you have shed;
If you think some praise is due him, now's the time to slip it to him,
For he cannot read his tombstone when he's dead!

More than fame and more than money is the comment kind and sunny,
And the hearty, warm approval of a friend;
For it gives to life a savor, and it makes you stronger, braver,
And it gives you heart and spirit to the end;
If he earns your praise, bestow it; if you like him, let him know it;
Let the words of true encouragement be said;
Do not wait 'till life is over and he's underneath the clover,
For he cannot read his tombstone when he's dead.

PICKING HIS POCKET AS CHARITY TASK

By Winifred Black

"I'LL tell you how I got my subscription from him," said the elderly member of the Red Cross solicitation committee.

"I'm not young and I'm not pretty, and everybody told me there wasn't even a chance of my getting a penny from him, but he belonged in my district and he was on my list, and I made up my mind that I'd get him somehow or other—and it was just as easy!"

Then she told us how she managed it. It seems that Mr. Fullpurse isn't a very generous man. You can tell it by the way he takes a nickel out to pay his carfare. He hangs on to it till the last minute, and pinches it between his thumb and finger and looks sourly at the conductor and acts as if he thought somebody was getting the best of him when the conductor rings his little fare bell—so he really was rather a hard customer to approach.

But the middle-aged solicitor knew his wife, and the wife was always telling how she wished she had an automobile of her own, but her husband had a bit of prejudice against them.

He wouldn't even ride in a neighbor's motor car, if he could help it — and he usually could, for he's one of those persons who isn't apt to call up the doctor for something to allay a fever caused by the excitement of too many pressing invitations for his society.

He says that machines are dangerous and they're extravagant, and they're senseless and they lead to evil ways.

Whether he means gasoline or new fur robes or braid on the chauffeur's cap by "evil ways," no one has yet been able to make out, but the elderly solicitor didn't care anything about what he meant. She knew what she meant all right, and she started out to explain it to him—in her own sweet, feminine way.

She made an appointment with him for ten o'clock in the morning, and she took pains to arrive at ten minutes past ten.

"I'm sorry to be late," she said. "I could have been on time, I suppose, but I simply wouldn't get into that crazy automobile my daughter is always running around in.

"I suppose I'm hopelessly old-fashioned, but I can't get over the idea that there is something not quite respectable about these honking, tooting, skidding, sliding motor cars. And, besides, they're so extravagant. I feel that in this day of economy it's really wicked to use one.

"I know you'll think I'm very silly to feel so. Everybody laughs at me for it, but I can't help it."

By that time Mr. Fullpurse was here to command. And before she left his office he gave her a check for twice the amount she had even dared to hope for, all because she was such a nice, sensible woman, and he thought it was his duty to encourage her in her nice, sensible ways.

CRITICISM MAKES US SORE AT TRUTH

By Elizabeth Jordan

"I'M just telling you this, dear," your friend says tenderly,

"for your good. I thought you ought to know it."

She sighs and you echo the sigh. What she has said may be for your good—you admit that—but it was not pleasant to listen to. You try to thank her, but the words are half-hearted. You are really disliking her so much at the moment that it is hard to be grateful.

She nods at you sadly. "I was afraid you would take it that way," she murmurs.

You arouse yourself. You assure her warmly that she is perfectly right in her criticism, that she has been perfectly right to make it, and that you are very grateful to her.

She knows better. She knows that you are not grateful and she now realizes the truth—that she has destroyed a very pleasant friendship. This friendship will not die immediately. But it is like a garden that has been subjected to a severe frost. Its flowers wilt and hang their heads. Slowly, but surely, it loses its beauty.

Realizing, as you do, that the bloom is off your friendship, you begin to analyze the situation.

Why have you so resented your friend's criticism? It was a just one and no doubt she meant it kindly. The answer comes to you at once.

Because, however great our faults, we wish our friends to be blind to them. To be blind to faults is almost a duty of friendship, unless, indeed, we accept the child's definition: "A friend is someone who knows all about you and likes you, anyhow!"

In our hearts we prefer our own definition: "A friend is someone who knows all about you and thinks you are perfect."

Now, as a matter of fact, our friends don't think anything of the kind. The child's definition is much nearer the mark than ours. But we love to be admired. Most of all we love to be admired by those we really care for—by our friends.

We like to convince ourselves, against our own intelligence, that our friends do not see any faults in us. And this notwithstanding the fact that we see their faults with extraordinary clearness. If we are wise, however, we refrain from pointing them out.

Before we learn wisdom we try various experiments. Anna Howard Shaw once told me that in the early days of their friendship she and Frances Willard made an agreement to tell each other their most serious faults.

"We did it just once," ended Miss Shaw, sadly. "Never again!"

I have two girl friends who transformed a supremely selfish brother by steadily ascribing to him an astonishing unselfishness.

"Fred always thinks of us first," they would exclaim. And Fred, who had thought of nothing but himself for weeks, would suddenly think of them and plan something to make them happy.

Charges Food Waste at Camp Meade

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

The facts below have been called to my attention, and I believe your paper can perform a public duty by publishing them:

A man of Phillipston, Mass., called me on the phone and told me the waste of food, fuel and grain at Camp Meade, Maryland, is appalling. On one track, over which troop trains had passed, he said, the ground was littered with food for three and a half miles. The horses at the camp, where he was employed the past Winter as a carpenter, are overfed, and the grain they leave, although it has risen in value three hundred per cent. in two years, is swept up and thrown out to decay. Valuable cordwood was cut down and wantonly burned, while prohibitive prices were being charged for it in nearby cities. For this, my informant said, "we, the people, must pay in high taxes, loans and interest on loans."

A member of the military police at Camp Devens told me that something should be done to prevent the soldiers being robbed by the restaurant keepers, who sometimes charge as high as twenty-five cents for a sandwich and a cup of coffee there.

I advocate the keeping of hogs and hens at all cantonments, to be looked after by soldiers who have been trained in farm work.

Perhaps Bunting Is Too High for Patriotism!

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Where are all the flags that were flying to the breeze from many windows and doorways not long ago in both the business and residential districts? I stand and look across Dewey Square up Summer street and up Federal street and don't see a single flag. I also miss them all along the line coming on the train in the morning.

What seems to be the matter? Is the patriotism waning when it should be at its greatest height? Can't you stir the people up to show their colors and have the old Star Spangled Banner waving to the breeze from their homes and business places every day until the Huns are down and out? With all the influences brought to bear and the attention of the public called to Liberty Bonds, War Saving Stamps and our boys over there, what is there more inspiring or will serve to keep all of these things continually before us like seeing the Stars and Stripes whenever you look out of your window or walk on the street?

Won't you get after the people on this?

F. M. TRAFTON.
